

TAKE YOUR PICK

7 BROWNS

Position: Cornerback
Height: 5'11"
Weight: 193 lbs.
College: Florida

The Browns had the fourth worst pass defense in 2009, so they are hoping the best cornerback in this year's draft will turn the team's defensive woes around.

Joe Haden is a First-team All-American, who accumulated 68 tackles, four interceptions and three sacks in his junior season. His success led him to declare for the draft early.

Haden was a team leader while at Florida and is expected to pick up right where he left off.

When Haden was selected by Cleveland, tears streamed down his face as he realized a boyhood dream.

Haden has been described as physically intimidating with outstanding athleticism.

The greatest knock on Haden's play is that he will take chances - perhaps too many. As long as he makes the same types of plays in Cleveland that he made in Gator Country, the only fans complaining will be the ones outside of the Dawg Pound.

Haden should easily be a starter from the moment he steps onto the field and will be a force to be reckoned with.

If his career at Florida is any indication, he is going to be an all-around corner capable of any receiver on the field.

9 BILLS

Position: Running Back
Height: 5'11"
Weight: 195 lbs.
College: Clemson

The Marshawn Lynch experience is not over, despite C.J. Spiller being drafted to compete for carries in what is now a full backfield in Buffalo.

Lynch has averaged 4.0, 4.1 and 3.8 yards per carry over the last three seasons, and fellow veteran running back Fred Jackson received a four-year contract extension before last season began.

Enter Spiller, and it must be asked: will Buffalo sport a three-headed monster or another offensive offense?

Spiller figures to be one of the speediest players in the draft class, but Buffalo may not suit his playing style. Spiller needs space to run around in. Putting him in the Buffalo offense is almost like a punishment. You just cannot help but feel bad for the guy.

Spiller is an outside-the-tackles runner, and Buffalo does not have starting caliber players at offensive tackle.

Spiller might be the most explosive player in the entire draft, but that will not mean anything if the Bills cannot figure out ways to put the ball in his hands in open space.

The 1,715 all-purpose yards in his senior year exemplify the times that Spiller can be.

In Buffalo, he will need to rely on those around him more.

STEELERS

Position: Center
Height: 6'5"
Weight: 304 lbs.
College: Florida

Maurkice Pouncey might want to brush up on his history before he boards a flight to Pittsburgh. The standards he will be held to as the Steelers offensive center were made by three generations of players before his time in the show.

Pittsburgh was spoiled by great centers from the '70s and into the new millennium. There was Mike Webster, Dermonti Dawson and Jeff Hartings. When Hartings retired, so did the run of great Steelers centers.

Now, Pouncey will have the opportunity to be the starting point of the return to the glory for Steelers offensive anchoring linemen.

Pouncey will fit right into the Steelers zone-blocking scheme. He boasts elite athleticism for a 300-plus pound rookie.

In 2009 he was named a Second-team All-American and was awarded with the Manning-Trophy as the nation's best collegiate center.

Pouncey's all-around blocking ability in the passing and running game undoubtedly attracted the Steelers front office, as the organization has run out one-trick pony over the last five seasons.

Pouncey will get his first test when Casey Hampton lines up against him in training camp.
