

by Carol Hughes
Staff writer

After nine years together, most groups go sour one way or the other. Either they break up or quit making the hits. The Beach Boys are the exception. Like Howdy Dowdy, they're back again.

They did their old songs and their new, from Surfin' USA to Caroline, No. The latter was an exceptionally good solo by Dennis Wilson.

The old songs 'Do It Again, I Get Around' are the same as they always were, full of action and fun. They contrast sharply with the new Beach Boy sounds and together made a show that pleased everyone at the Warner.

The Concert made it very obvious that the Beach Boys could teach harmonically oriented groups as Crosby, Stills, and Young and The Jefferson Airplane quite a few tricks, but then while Steve Stills was in high school and Gracie Slick was willingly attending Debutante Balls, the Beach Boys were showing up how it was all done, and after all these years they still Get Around.

