The Behrend Tradition

appointed president of the company, a post Mr. Behrend held until his death in 1940. Mr. Behrend, who was active in community affairs, was Erie's only citizen to be awarded the Distinguished Service Certificate by the American Legion, Pennsylvania Department. Mrs. Behrend also received many honors, and in 1958 she was one of the first individuals to be awarded the Penn State Medal in recognition of her "outstanding contribution to higher education."

The first class of 152 students entered the Behrend Center in 1948. These students were able to complete only their freshman year at the center; but in five years the curriculum was expanded to include the sophomore year and two associate degree programs. Erie Hall, the first new building at the center, was constructed entirely with contributions from a community fund drive in 1953.

In the University reorganization of 1959, the Commonwealth Campus system was established and the Behrend Center became the Behrend Campus of the Pennsylvania State University.

city. After eleven years of operation, the campus boasted 2,000 alumni and an enrollment of more than 300 students, doubling the enrollment of 1948.

The decade of the 1960s and early 1970s saw much construction on the campus. In 1962 the Otto F. Behrend Building was dedicated to Dr. Otto Behrend, Ernst's brother. In 1968 the J. Elmer Reed Building, named after the head of the committee which developed a public higher education institution in Erie, was erected, and in that and the following year the Niagara and Perry residence halls were opened. During the summer of 1970, the Edwin W. Nick Building containing laboratories and classrooms was completed north of the Otto Behrend Building. A residence hall, Lawrence Hall, and a food service building, Dobbins Hall, was opened in 1971 to accommodate the increasing number of students.

In 1971, with a total enrollment of more than 1,200 students, the first junior class of approximately 35 students was accepted at Behrend Campus. The following June, the Behrend Campus graduated its first class of baccalaureate students; two of them had completed all of their course work at Behrend. Approximately 1,500 students were enrolled in 1972 and 15 students were graduated in the baccalaureate programs. Students were offered two baccalaureate majors: the B.S. in General Arts and Sciences and the B.A. or B.S. in Science.

On January 20, 1973, by an act of the Board of Trustees of The Pennsylvania State University, the Behrend Campus became The Behrend College, the only Penn State campus to receive college status within the University.

In 1972-73, 31 baccalaureate students graduated from the Behrend College out of an enrollment of 1,579.

In 1973-74 the associate degree program in Letters, Arts, and Sciences was added to the existing associate degree offerings of Electrical Engineering Technology, Mechanical Engineering Technology, and Business.

Many new programs were added to the curriculum in 1975-76: an associate degree program in Nursing and the Army Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) and several baccalaureate majors.

At the baccalaureate level, The Behrend College now provides a significant educational alternative within The Pennsylvania State University system for students to complete B.A. degrees in Communications, Economics, English: Literature, General Arts and Sciences, History, Political Science, Pre-Law, Psychology Studies, and Science; or B.S. degrees in Accounting, Applied Science, Bio-science, Economics, Management, Mathematical Studies, and Psychology Studies. The Bachelor of Philosophy degree, tailored to an individual student's needs, permits a program of studies to transcend the somewhat more conventional baccalaureate programs. A Master of Engineering Science degree is also available.

The Behrend College of The Pennsylvania State University is an educational community which combines the personalization and flexibility of a small college with the academic resources of a major land-grant university. This unique combination enables 1,700 Behrend students, both undergraduate and graduate, to achieve their personal and academic potential.
