Dinner For Strangers Promotes Togetherness

by Kimberly Ford
Collegian Staff Writer

Do you have that pioneer, get-up-and-go, "I'll-try-anything", kind of personality? Are you reserved, simplistic, and interested in the arts? Are you longing for a home cooked meal and interesting conversation? If so, you may have that "certain something" to be a welcome addition to the first annual "Dinners for 12 Strangers". The "Dinners" program attempts to bring together students and faculty with varying interests. During the dinner on March 17 at various Behrend instructors' homes, students and faculty will have the opportunity to communicate in a manner other than the traditionally formal classroom atmosphere.

Again, one of the objectives of the "Dinners" program is to bring students and faculty of varying interests together; therefore a typical guest list might be comprised of engineering majors, communications majors, and business management majors.

The "Dinners" program will be paid for by sponsors, including the Student Government Association, Inter-Club Council, and Office of Student Affairs. A mini-grant for the project will absorb the majority of the cost.

Jamie Grimm, Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, commented, "Students often forget that their professors are real people and professors often forget that their students are real people. This dinner will provide an opportunity for each to see how the other half lives."

Having Problems?
