Art and Computers

Erie Art Museum—The Erie Art Museum, 411 State Street, is programmed for art! This latest show, "Computer Generated Graphics and Animation", sponsored by Mace Electronics, advances art into the computer age. From March 2 - April 23, the Museum's main gallery will explore the world of design and animation via computer.

Visitors to the museum may participate in the production of graphic art forms and take their achievements home. With pre-programmed graphic displays, the viewer can manipulate images on the monitor screen using a variety of lines, textures and shades.

One program involves the use of a video camera connected to a Macintosh computer. The camera's video image is displayed on the computer's monitor. By using other graphics programs, the viewer can make any modifications, in the video image, changing tones, textures and configurations.

On display will be 50 color photographs computed on the most advanced technological machines; ten didactic photographs detailing the image-making process; and a ten minute video cassette of animation, that "comes to life" providing an excellent introduction into the most recent development in computer graphics.

"Computer Generated Graphics and Animation", is organized by CGRG, Computer Graphics Research Group of Ohio State University, who are the forefront of computer graphics development.

This exhibition is an excellent introduction to the most recent developments in computer graphics, which connects technology to art. You may experience this event in the Museum's main gallery, Tuesdays - Saturdays 11 - 5 p.m., Sundays from 1 - 5 p.m. or by appointment. For more information call 459-5477.

Behrend receives funding for computer additions and more

by Patrick Schlipf
Collegian Staff Writer

The Pennsylvania State University has approved Behrend's request for an appropriation of $196,000.

Behrend is the "only unit of Penn State to get all the money (we) asked for," said Jack Burke, associate provost and dean. The money will generally purchase instructional equipment. Burke said he expected only half of what was requested "given our size." The funding came out of a PSU budget surplus of $2.8 million.

Recipients of the funding include the divisions of: Humanities and Communications, Business and Social Sciences, and Science, Engineering and Technology.

The computer center will receive equipment including more hardware, software, Zenith computers, and terminals.

Also planned for purchase is scientific equipment for labs and equipment for arts and music with the music department attaining a new grand piano.

Communications and the computer center will receive two wide-screen "projectors". The projectors will display a computer screen, for example, on a wide screen so an entire class can view. One will be mounted in the Hamermill Building and the other set on wheels for mobility. Additionally, Erie Hall will receive about $20,000 worth of Nautilus equipment to be used for class only.

The money, obtained through an RFP (Request For Proposal), has already transferred to Behrend and is being put to use. Behrend may be funded yearly since University Park's funding program is permanent.
