New Director of Admissions hired

by Lori Beals
Collegian Staff Writer

Starting Oct. 20, Patricia Bailey replaced Steven Mostert as the new Director of Admissions. Before coming to Behrend, Ms. Bailey worked for 5 years in admissions at Mercyhurst, and for a year and a half at St. Vincent College in Latrobe, Pennsylvania. She went to graduate school at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and received a Masters of Arts in Student Personnel Services with an emphasis in Admissions and Financial Aid.

Ms. Bailey says that her job as Director of Admissions is to develop correspondence for high school students, send flyers out to them, develop recruiting strategies, oversee functions of the Admissions office and to represent Penn State-Behrend. She also plans orientation, open houses, and special events related to admissions, like a visitation day at Behrend for high school students during the summer. When asked if she enjoyed the job, she said that "so far, it's very nice. I found the people outstanding."

Ms. Bailey liked Erie because she lived here before, and she decided to come to Behrend because she "felt it was an excellent opportunity for professional growth." She stated that she liked being part of the Penn State system, and also having the "flavor of a small college" at Behrend.

Ms. Bailey says she enjoys being the Director of Admissions because she likes "to deal with high school students" and also people in the 18 to 25 year age group. "They are what's happening, they help keep you young." She also said that she likes being able to show young people the "opportunities that are available to them." She stated that she would welcome the chance to talk to more Behrend students because she believes that "students here are the greatest resource for spreading the word about Behrend."

Director of Activities from U.P. speaks here

by Steve Aller

Behrend was the third stop for Dr. Mel Klein, Director of Student Activities at University Park, on a six-stop travel to a number of the commonwealth campuses. Acting also as Director of Unions, Dr. Klein and his office have the responsibility of helping the 402 clubs and greek letter organizations at University Park with their financial programming along with arranging student activities. To top off his repertoire of responsibilities, he is also the associate head of the Division of Student Programming, an "umbrella division within the office of student services" which oversees all student organization needs and University facilities.

Anticipating questions as to the reason for his visit to Behrend and other Penn State campuses, Dr. Klein clarified his purposes to the random mix of about 20 club members and interested students present: "I'm not here to...sneak around and look around and look over people's shoulders. One of the responsibilities that was clearly identified by Dr. Jordan was that at University Park there would be certain administrative offices that would be responsible for providing service and leadership throughout the University system. "He continued to explain his obligation to be knowledgeable of students' settings, concerns, and interests in order to best fulfill his post as Director of Student Activities for the campuses. Initially believing this task could be accomplished long distance by telephone, Dr. Klein found this not possible and is now attempting to familiarize himself with many of the major Penn State campuses.

Topics of discussion ranged from student organization registration processes to RA liabilities at off campus student "social functions". (According to Dr. Klein, unless the acts of the off campus students have a "substantial adverse affect to the Institution", any actions of the off campus students are not the University's liability and RA's have equal liability with any other student at the function. Any legal action is between the student organization and local governing officials when the action is off campus.)

Dr. Klein wrapped up the question-and-answer period by requesting feedback to take back with him to University Park. Comments were voiced on the lack of computer equipment, some alleged "high school" level teaching at Penn State campuses, and the lack of student turnout at campus organized functions. Dr. Klein recommended possible daytime functions to cater to the two-thirds of Behrend's community which resides off campus and doesn't see good enough incentive to return to campus functions in the evening and on the weekends.

ROTC places fourth in Challenge

by Lori Beals

On November 1st and 2nd, the 10 members of Behrend's Ranger Challenge team, competed against 14 other teams from western Pennsylvania. The team members were Heidi Gebhardt, Kim Audette, James Gavrilis, Ted Caldwell, Dean Meinert, Brian Anderson, Gary Pirl, Tom Lippert, Joe Dominiak, and Tom Milley, the team captain.

On Saturday, November 1st, the Ranger Challenge team first competed in a grenade throw, where each member had to correctly throw a grenade 20 meters at a silhouette target. Three points were scored for hitting within a 3 meter circle, and 5 points were scored for hits within a 2 meter circle, or grenades which hit the silhouette. Behrend's team came in third place in this event. Next, each member of the team was timed for their assembly of the M-16 rifle and the M-60 machine gun. The team also came in third in this event.

Building and crossing a one rope bridge between two trees was the next event. The rope was secured on the far tree by the first person, and the slack was pulled out on the near side by the rest of the team, tightening the rope so that each member could cross without touching the ground. The Challenge team captured a second place score in this event.

Next, the team traveled to the rifle range to compete in M-16 rifle fire. Each member was required to zero their weapon with 12 rounds. They then fired 30 rounds into a paper target containing 30 different-sized silhouettes, attempting to place one round in each silhouette. The team's scores were totaled, and another second place was gained.

The last event the team was in on Saturday was the Army Physical Fitness Test, which consists of sit-ups, push-ups, and a 2 mile run. After totaling the scores for the day, Behrend's Ranger Challenge team was in third place, behind Edinboro University of Pa. (EUP) in first place, and Indiana University of Pa. (IUP) in second place.

On Sunday morning, each team competed in the 10 kilometer road march. Each person carried a ruck sack containing an extra uniform, field jacket, boots, steel helmet, and personal undergarments. Each person also was required to wear Load Carrying Equipment, and carry an M-16. After completing the march in 1 hour and 18 minutes, the team rested while the final scores were computed.

First place was won by IUP, second place went to EUP, third went to Mansfield University, who edged out Behrend in the road march, and fourth place was awarded to Behrend. Behrend's team members had fun and were glad they had the opportunity to meet and compete with Rangers from other schools.

Department of Humanities leaves Turnbull Hall

by Barb Byers
Collegian Staff Writer

The Humanities Division offices have recently been moved from Turnbull Hall to various annexes, and the new School of Business will soon occupy the building.

John Ream, Director of Operations, said that "with the creation of the School of Business, we felt it would be better for its faculty to be in Turnbull because they have fewer faculty members than the Humanities. Also, the business faculty expressed some concern about their location after the restructure of the division. The business faculty felt a need to centralize after the reorganization, because otherwise they would have been scattered all over campus."

Now the Division of Human and Social Sciences offices are in the new South Carriage House Annex, the West Carriage House and the Carriage House. Some people are happy about this move, while others express some concern.

Diana Hume George, Full Professor of English, said, "In some respects, this step is an improvement in circumstances for individual faculty members. These new offices are...private, and a few faculty members previously had to share office space.... With all this taken into consideration," George said, "I do think there are strong disadvantages to the change. Turnbull Hall was old and in disrepair, yes, but it afforded a central meeting location for faculty and students to talk, gather informally, exchange ideas, be together-- and that's how a lot of the most important learning takes place."

On the other hand, Dr. Daniel Frankforter, History Professor, thinks that the move is a positive one. "I really like the new offices," he said, "they offer more privacy for the faculty as well as for the students when they want to discuss any problems they may be having."

"There are some inconveniences," Frankforter added, "particularly that there is no running water and no bathrooms, but basically I like it here."

As far as plumbing facilities are concerned John Ream said that "there was just no practical way to provide water to the annex."

Linda Ditrich, a non-traditional 4th semester English major, thinks that perhaps the Humanities division needs more emphasis overall. "Lately, I have wondered, in the light of the Humanities' move from Turnbull Hall, and also after I saw the discouraging lack of literature courses offered in the spring, just what the fate of the Humanities (at Behrend) will be," Ditrich said.

Janet O'Hare, a senior communications major, believes the move may have "devalued the Liberal Arts program here. It doesn't bother me that much personally," O'Hare said, "because I will graduate in May; but I really think it takes something away from the appeal of the Humanities Division."

Although the new Humanities Department locations are referred to as "temporary," they actually are permanent facilities. "Calling the new offices 'temporary,'" Ream said, "refers to the idea that they could have been two trailers or pre-built buildings. These are here to stay, even though water will not be available up there."

Turnbull Hall is in the planning stages of renovation, Ream said, and construction is tentatively scheduled to begin during the spring semester and should ideally be completed by Fall 1987.

basketball court with folding bleacher seating, three racquetball courts, a fitness/wellness center and locker rooms.

In addition, the building will house two classrooms, to be used by the entire campus, and a multi-purpose room, to be used for aerobics, dance and various community activities.

The projected cost of the building is $2.8 million, Lovette said.

The Board also approved sketch plans for a bookstore at Behrend Campus. The plans, designed by the Office of Physical Plant, call for a 14,500-square-foot addition to the Reed Building.

"When completed, the two-floor addition will add a large sales area, office and storage space, an entrance lobby and sitting area to the Reed Building," Lovette said. "It will actually create a new, major entrance to the building."

A proposed addition to the engineering laboratory at The Pennsylvania State University at Harrisburg, The Capital College was also approved by the Board of Trustees.

The 40- by 70-foot addition, designed by the Office of Physical Plant, will add an entrance vestibule, a small lab to house several computers and drafting tables, and a 30-student classroom, Lovette said.

The existing machine shop will be moved to a renovated area which will also include a new classroom.

The estimated cost of the project is $265,000.

Lovette told the Trustees that bids will likely be called for the four projects in mid-1987.

S.G.A Minutes

* President Doug Gainor announced that Parliamentarian Alene Rhode officially submitted her letter of resignation and nominations for a new Parliamentarian are now being considered.

* Ideas on how to spend the $20,000 "impact money" are now being considered and suggestions should be brought to the SGA office (behind the RUB desk). Already proposed ideas are a "Discover Erie Trip," a "big name" event sponsored by SPC, display cases in the Reed Building, and the Collegian budget being taken from these funds. Voice your opinion today!

* The Joint Residence Council is making constitution amendments, and the residence hall phone listings will be available next semester. JRC is also sponsoring a fund raising can collection as well as suggesting a "Meet the Government Day" for all students. A "Campus Blues" survey will be distributed to get student opinions on how to improve campus living.

* Commuter Council and Student Services will host a Christmas Dance on Dec. 5.

* Student Programming Council announced that sign-ups for the ever-popular Air Band Contest are now being taken at the RUB desk. SPC is also looking into block-booking performers with other colleges, saving everyone some money. The movie of the week is James Bond's "Octopussy".

* Student Services is sponsoring a Daytona Trip for the spring semester. More information is available in the Student Government Offices.

* CCSG is sponsoring a trip to Barbados

* The Sister College Committee is working on a proposal to develop a sister college relationship with a university in Canada.

* The Inter-Club Council had their budget request of $283 approved, and will sponsor a pizza party for the club with the highest number of blood donors.

* The first "Sunday With the Times" will be held on Dec. 7, at 10:00 a.m. The speaker will be a faculty member not yet announced.

* Increasing the size of the Student Government Association was suggested by Commuter Senator Lori Rogosky.

* The Ski Team budget was passed as an allocation of $500 with $255 to be held aside as a matching price for all the Team's fundraising efforts.

* The Roundtable Club was allocated $300 to sponsor poets Cheryl Bell and Michael Tkach at a reading on Nov. 11.

Leslie Scholarship offered

University Park, Pa.--The Donald and Dorothy Leslie Scholarship has been created to assist students at Penn State's Behrend College, the Board of Trustees learned Nov. 7.

The scholarship was established with a gift of about $25,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Donald S. Leslie Jr., Mrs. Donald (Dorothy) Leslie Sr. and corporate matching funds. Donald Leslie Jr. is chairman of the board of the Hammermill Paper Company of Erie. Donald Leslie Sr., who died in 1983, served for many years as Hammermill's chief executive officer.

Consideration for the scholarship will be given to all fulltime students from Erie County who are enrolled or planning to enroll at The Behrend College and who have demonstrated superior academic achievement.

Recipients will be selected by the Behrend College Scholarship Committee. The number of awards made annually and the amount of each will depend on available earnings from the Leslie Scholarship fund.

Each scholarship will be awarded for one academic year but may be renewed, provided the recipient continues to meet conditions of eligibility and funds are available.

Additional contributions to the endowment may be made by interested persons or organizations.
