Music review Beastie Boys are licensed to ill

by Paul Miniger
Collegian Staff Writer

40 station away from hearing
"Fight for Your Right (to Party),"

AHHHG! Beasties! Who would have ever guessed that the organisms floating around under Pasteur's microscope would become synonymous with three rock-rap brats, known as the Beastie Boys.

Certainly not Pasteur. Yet, despite the name, the Beastie Boys already dominate the U.S. album chart and hold respective places on the college and dance charts as well. As a result, one is just a Top hit single from "License to Ill." Like Run-DMC or Big Audio Dynamite, the Beastie Boys' music is a collision of rock, rap, and funk. The Beasties enhance the rock part with wailing guitar riffs that sometimes trick you into believing that you're listening to metal. Yet, a second later, the music shifts into a full blown hip-hop beat, complete with scratching and thumping bass lines. All this is joined with the Beastie Boys' free-associated lyrics. Like most other raps, the Beasties' banter deals with issues of social importance such as crime, drugs, and poverty. But sometimes the Beasties bring things in on a more personal level. On "Fight for Your Right," fellow Beasties complain "living at home is such a drag, your mom threw away your best porno mag." Other lyrics describe the fun of getting kicked out of White Castle or picking up 'girlies' downtown.

Nonetheless, the two most notable songs on the album are "No Sleep Till Brooklyn" and "Brass Monkey." "No Sleep till Brooklyn" rocks because of guest metal guitarist Kerry King. This is probably the only serious rap-rock song on the album. "Brass Monkey" is either the name of the Beastie Boys' favorite beer or the caricature of the mug they drink from. Either way, one can picture the Beastie Boys writing "Brass Monkey" while sitting around getting smashed.

The sole clinker of "Licensed to Ill" seems to be the song "Time to Get Ill." On which, the theme from Mr. Ed is hacked and scratched in a volatile rap fashion while the Beasties' chant "What's the time? It's time to get ill."

Wilbur, are they serious? Thanks to WBCR for donation of the album.

Kim & Reggie Harris and spiritual rock

University Relations—On March 13, in the Wintergreen Cafe at 8:00 p. m., from Philadelphia, PA, a city rich in musical history and accomplishment, comes one of the most original and refreshing groups on today's music scene, Kim and Reggie Harris.

From traditional songs and spirituals to their pop-rock originals this duo of ten years has continually won raves for their sound.

Kim and Reggie Harris have received the National Association for Campus Activities nomination for Coffeehouse Entertainers of the year in both 1983 and 1984.

Combining acoustic guitars and stellar vocal arrangements with light percussion and smiles, versatility is the key to their appeal.

Their musical compositions have been used for TV and radio commercials in the Philadelphia area, as well as for a line of nationally distributed musical greeting cards.

In 1981 Kim and Reggie released their first single, "Stranger in the Shadows," on the Ascension Records label. Their first album, "Music and the Underground Railroad," also on Ascension Records, has been well received for its musical and historical content. The album is included in museum and library collections around the country.

Kim and Reggie Harris have entertained at colleges, clubs and in various concert and festival settings. Their warm, positive image continues to win friends and fans with each performance!

ROTC offers challenging summer

by Thomas Milley
Collegian Contributing Writer

If you were bored and without a job last summer and are worried about facing the same thing this summer, or have no idea what you'd like to do when you graduate, the Army ROTC has an obligation-free program for you. The program is six weeks long and is called ROTC Basic Camp. Not to be confused with basic training, also known as "Boot Camp," ROTC Basic Camp is shorter, consists only of ROTC cadets, and the attendees are under no obligation to the Army and sign no contracts. Basic training is 9-9½ weeks long and is attended by Army National Guard and U.S. Army Reserve members.

ROTC Basic Camp is held in several sessions at Ft. Knox, Kentucky which is about 35 miles south of Louisville. The training is fast-paced, rigorous, and challenging. It entails a multitude of military skills including military map reading, land navigation, rifle marksmanship, leadership techniques, individual and unit tactics, communications, first aid, drill, parades and ceremonies, and of course physical training and military courtesy and customs.

This year's attendees will earn over $700 for their short visit to Ft. Knox, free transportation to and from camp, and free room and board, which is in itself an interesting and fun experience in military living.

This article is written to offer you an opportunity and a challenge that you may not have been aware of otherwise. If you are a sophomore and this sounds appealing to you, it might be worth your while to pick up an application for ROTC Basic Camp from Major McDavid or Captain Donahue in the ROTC Office. If you're still not sure, just stop in and feel free to ask as many questions as you'd like. They're here to serve you.

If you're still not interested, but are seeking financial aid and are having difficulties raising money for next term, the most important thing you can get out of your trip to Ft. Knox is a two year full scholarship which pays for books and also provides you with a subsistence check of $100 per month for your junior and senior year of college.

In order to attend ROTC Basic Camp, you must fill out an application available in the ROTC office. The deadline to apply is April 30.
