Local Retail Clerks On Strike by Deborah Glass

"When I started to work in 1941, grocery store workers were some of the lowest paid people around, and people only stayed until something better came along," said Mr. Chalmers Sheton, the Retail Clerks Union's business representative of Local 1436.

Before 1938, when the Food Fair workers were organized, there was no limit to the number of hours a person could work. Mr. Chalmers remembered when he would work from 8 in the morning until 3 the next morning for $16 a week.

The Union established rates of pay, vacations, hospital and medical care, and job security. It was also instrumental in establishing the federal and state wage laws, workers' compensation, and unemployment benefits.

Then Mrs. Elva Beattie, president of Local 1436, commented on the present strike. "For the first time the members of the Retail Clerks Union of Local 1436 have found it necessary to strike 15 Food Fair chain stores. The strike went into effect midnight, Monday, February 7th. Company representatives and union representatives met until 4 a.m. Sunday with Federal Mediator Frank Perlis over disputes of contract and money. The company's new offer was also rejected because it fell short of what is needed to settle the strike."

Picket lines have been established at all 15 stores in Harrisburg, York, Hanover, and Carlisle and will continue until a settlement is reached.

We as students must realize the benefits people have gained through struggle and the crucial significance of this strike. We must all face the working world one day and take into consideration what still has to be done to benefit the masses of workers today.
