THE MADWOMAN IS COMING!

THE COUNTESS HAS TEA—And two of her fellow madwomen join her (left to right) Thelma Barnett, Doe Perkowska and Samantha Bower.

On June 7 and 8, 1971 the curtain will rise in the Classroom Building Auditorium on the second student theatrical production of the year, Jean Giraudoux' "The Madwoman of Chaillot". This farcical madcap, to be produced by the Humanities 499B Class, will be directed by Mr. Budney with assistance from student director, Ned Irish. Leading the cast will be the able Mrs. Thelma Barnett, cast as Countess Aurelia, the Madwoman. She is joined by three fellow madwomen played by Doe Perkowska, Samantha Bower and Ann Ferrino. Notable male roles are Thomas Ogden (President), John Livi (Ragpicker) and Ed Hoffman (Prospector) and Michael Zimmerman (Pierre). A supporting cast includes Jerry Till, Flossie Jancsar, Richard Schroth, Suzanne Jordan, Lynn Mastrone, Mike Blank, Sandy Simpson, Ron Haag, Joe Luciani, Gary Wetterhall, Dave Keller, Ned Irish and Millie Royer.

The play, produced on Broadway and revived as the musical "Dear World", centers about the plot of infamous businessmen to drill for oil in Paris. Their scheme is foiled by the aging Countess Aurelia, whose adventures will surely captivate the audience. The play has most recently appeared in movie form with Katherine Hepburn in the starring role.

Jean Giraudoux was famous for his style as the "Theatre of Language". His plays' meanings are transmitted not by the action, but by words. Also the author of such critically acclaimed plays as "Ondine", "The Enchanted", and "Siegfried", Giraudoux died in 1944.

A highly recommended attraction of your spring term, "The Madwoman of Chaillot" is not to be missed! Be there on June 7 or 8!

New Courses Announced

Two new courses will be offered to interested students during the fall term. The courses will be offered from the Social Science curriculum but should attract interest from all disciplines.

The first of these will be Social Science 499A: Harrisburg Urban Term. The enrollment for this course will be limited to 12 students with three course units given to those completing the course.

So. Sc. 499A will be "The analysis of urban problems and programs through direct observation of the techniques and mechanisms of city government, interaction with public officials and urban leaders and participation in urban surveys."

Weekly seminars will be held with city officials, community leaders, and state and federal government experts in urban affairs. Topics will include:

Housing code enforcement and urban redevelopment.

The political and administrative structure of city government.

Intergovernmental relationships (federal, state, suburban municipalities and school districts).

Urban planning and goals. Human relations and urban services.

Mental health, manpower planning, schools and the criminal justice system.

Students will help conduct land use and social surveys in a variety of areas through the city and will accompany city employees inspecting housing and buildings. There will be approximately 20 hours of field experience each week. Two examinations will be based on the seminars and on required readings. A term report based on field observation and analysis will also be required. Students will work with the instructor and the city government coordinator in the planning and evaluation of the course.

The second course will be: Psychosocial Science 499, 3 Units, Human Service Delivery Systems (Three Course Units, Enrollment Limited to 10).

The purpose of the course is to provide the student with a term in the field for the study of models for the delivery of services to clients and the application of this model to a specific program, including how this one program interfaces with other programs in the overall system.

Student assignments will include weekly seminars, an assigned reading list, examinations, a field placement, and a term paper based on the field placement.

Professionals in the planning and delivery of health, welfare, and mental health services will participate in the seminars. Topics will include client advocacy, community mental health, the role of voluntary agencies, evaluation of human service systems, rehabilitation and habilitation, epidemiology, and client dehumanization.

In addition to the instructor each project will involve a professional in the field actively engaged in this area of work. Supervisory assistance is available in such areas as behavior modification programs for the retarded or for the mentally ill; development of a community-based half-way house for ex-patients; systems analysis of health care or mental health programs; design, planning, and implementation of social skills programs for mental patients; and epidemiological research into client profiles by diagnosis, county, agency, etc.

The instructor will conduct weekly meetings (one group seminar per week and one individual meeting with each participant at least once per week). Initially, the meetings will consist of work on the planning and design of the learning activities, and preparation for the student projects. Each student will maintain a log and learning experiences will be reviewed weekly. The instructor will visit and consult with the field supervisors regarding the student projects.

These courses are open to Social Science majors while students from other programs are eligible with permission of their program heads. Selection of students will be made by a committee based on interest, experience and career goals. Application forms and additional information are available in the Social Science Suite-W-153. For additional information or details, see Ken Masters.
