the University Board of Trustees for approval. Upon approval, one dollar would be added to each student's activity fee, which is part of the tuition sum, a term.

Commonwealth Campuses can benefit from Penn PIRG through the proposed state organization which would divide Pennsylvania into three regions—Western, Central and Eastern—with campuses working in their region's activities, through funds channeled back to them from the University collections.

"This is not a Commonwealth Campus and Old Main organization," said Penn PIRG member James McClure. "It is a Penn State concept with every campus working together."

Commonwealth Campuses would probably be represented in Penn PIRG through COP, or a similar operation.

The definition of the mission of the University was also brought up in further discussion dealing with the Grubb Report, and COP members said they felt this, in addition to recommendations concerning security and health services at the Commonwealth Campuses, needed further clarification.

Joe Landis, Ogontz SGA president, called for "concrete recommendations in the areas which Dr. Grubb has stressed," by the council. Individual Commonwealth Campuses will send recommendations to Landis for further evaluation of the Grubb Report in February.

Hazleton President Paul Yanoshik asked for discussion on Senate Rule III-D-8, dealing with the publishing and distributing of student publications. The Senate rule states that material published by students of the University may be sold on campus only if it is produced or sold by a chartered student organization.

The question arose over the publication of an underground newspaper, "Guerrilla," at the Hazleton Campus, at the December meeting of COP, where the original resolution was defeated. At this week's meeting, however, the council tabled a similar resolution for a review of rules governing the student publications until copies of the resolution and existing rules become available.

In other business, Ogontz President Joe Landis was appointed by acclamation as the council's additional representative to the University's Academic Planning Commission. Terry Wimmer, Capitol president, was appointed by the council to the commission last December.
