

Penn State Ekes Out Win Over Iowa

It nearly happened. Last Saturday, the Penn State Nittany Lions almost lost their first football game at home in close to two years. Only a desperation touchdown drive salvaged a 14 to 10 win over the Hawkeyes from the University of Iowa.

Penn State came from behind in the final three minutes and scored the winning touchdown with but 36 seconds remaining. The face saving points came when State quarterback John Hufnagel, on a third-and-eight situation at the Iowa 10 yard line, scrambled out of the pocket and tossed to tight end Dan Natale who was open in the corner of the end zone.

The game marked the third straight week in which the outcome of the game was not determined until the final seconds. The Lions have been lucky to gain two victories in these frustrating, but exciting contests. For three Saturdays, Penn State has floundered, failing to score in the first half and demonstrating an acute lack of offensive power. State had the ball for 27 plays in the first two periods, yet produced only 68 yards in net yardage in this game. The average yards per play reflected a dismal 2.6.

But the defense in the first half was superb. Larry Ludwig, Bruce Bannon, John Skorupan, Ed O'Neil, Randy Crowder and the remaining members of the unit continually stymied the Hawkeye attack. Iowa received the opening kickoff, but lost the ball on the second play from scrimmage when Crowder stole the ball from Iowa QB Kyle Skogman just as he tried to hand it off. The Lions almost seemed as if they were refusing to play offense as three plunges into the line failed to produce the first down yardage. Al Vitiello tried a field goal from 44 yards out which was wide.

During the first quarter, the Lions fumbled the ball away twice and halfback John Cappelletti at one time carried the ball seven straight times. Hufnagel's problems were compounded when receivers Dave Bland and Bob Rickenbach dropped passes in the open. Iowa got the ball early in the second period and put together a drive which led to a field goal. Skogman completed passes for two first downs and ran for a third until the drive stalled at the State 27. Then Iowa's Harry Kokolus kicked a 44 yard field goal.

State's offense in the second quarter duplicated that of the first as they had the ball three times, each time running three plays, then punting. Iowa's Kokolus again tried a long field goal, but this time it was short. The half ended with Iowa ahead, 3-0.

Penn State looked dead in the third period. They blew a golden opportunity to score when Bruce Bannon recovered a fumble at the Iowa 26. State failed to move the ball, and then halfback Gary Hayman fumbled a punt and Iowa recovered on their own 40.

More fantastics were yet in the offing. Iowa came right back with a 63 yard march. End Brian Rollins got loose in the State secondary and caught Skogman's 36 yard heave on the goal line. With three minutes remaining, Iowa looked like a sure winner with a 10 to 7 lead. Fans started to leave the stadium in droves.

It was do or die for State. The ensuing kickoff flew into the end zone and State took possession on its own 20. Hufnagel completed a pass to Hayman in the left flat and he got to the 35 before he was downed. State had the firepower now. Huffy passed to Natale for eight more. After two incompletions, the crucial play of the game found the Lions with a fourth hand two at their own 43.

Hufnagel tried the option play to the right side. Just as it appeared he was stopped, Huffy tossed the ball to the trailing Cappelletti who raced down the sideline to the Iowa 25 yard line.

The fourth period in the battle of attrition provided the most excitement. The record crowd in Beaver Stadium of 58,065 stirred restlessly as Hayman dropped back deep in State territory to again field a punt. This time he latched on to the ball in heavy traffic at the five. He zig-zagged up the field and almost got loose before being tackled at the PSU 37. Hufnagel then directed State's first sustained drive of the game. The big plays were a 14 yard run by Hayman, an 11 yard sweep by Cappelletti, and a 21 yard pass-run play by Natale. Cappelletti got the final seven yards by bursting off tackle. Bitiello's placement gave the Lion's the lead with ten minutes left in the game.

The 32 yard run breathed new life into the attack. On the next play, Hayman burst through to the Hawkeye 12, but was shaken up on the play. He limped to the bench to the cheers of the appreciative fans. Two plays hence found the Lions with an illegal procedure penalty, endangering the drive. Hufnagel was undaunted, though, and passed to Natale on the critical third down call, putting the Lions ahead. The fans exploded; the finish was exhausting.

Dope Is Bad For You

Arlington, Texas (CPS) -- People who smoke marijuana and think they are enjoying themselves are wrong, according to a sociologist at the University of Texas.

Dr. Jess Lord, associate professor of sociology, came to that conclusion while doing research for his book, Marijuana and Personality Change. Marijuana users, according to Lord, usually describe their experiences as pleasurable, but psychology tests of subjects while under the influence of the drug did not bear out their contentions.

"The experience isn't like the user thinks it is," he said in a recent interview, "I'm convinced of that."

Lord believes the apparent deception isn't conscious or deliberate and "bears a lot more investigation." He can offer little explanation for the seeming paradox.

Lord has also come to the conclusion that marijuana is more dangerous than he previously believed.

"As I went through research, I became more impressed with the damaging aspects of marijuana. My impression of the drug shifted, believing it to be more dangerous than I had thought originally."

Three and a half years ago, Lord began research on his book with funds from a University of Tulsa grant. Since then he has supervised extensive testing of 37 marijuana users, both male and female, ranging in age from 17 to 23 years of age.

According to Lord, the 37 users had personality problems even when they weren't stoned.

"As a group," he laments, "they were poorly adjusted. They were considerably more maladjusted than the 'normal' college age group."

He obtained "very definite reactions" from test subjects in five areas: contact with reality, overt anxiety, social adjustment, excitement and personal adequacy. His studies indicated that as the amount of marijuana increased, response rose accordingly.

Lord also determined that females tended to show a "higher level of negative reaction" while males were more strongly influenced by the drug.

Yearbook Sale

The CAPITOLITE has announced that its fall yearbook sale will begin on October 16 in Vendroville. The sale will be a week long affair. Anyone who wishes to purchase the 1973 edition of the CAPITOLITE may do so by paying the total cost of the publication, seven dollars, or by submitting a down payment of four dollars to reserve their copy.

The reason for the increase in price is due to rising costs in publication and printing plus a tremendous cut in the CAPITOLITE's budget allotment from the Student Government Association. The yearbook's editorial staff, headed by Jan Marks, has expressed deep regret at the budget rejection.

Copies of the 1972 CAPITOLITE are still available for those who did not purchase one last year. The cost of the '72 yearbook was six dollars.
