

Harrisburg Women's Movement and Pregnancy

Kathy Bard of the Harrisburg Women's Movement, has announced that the "newly revised" edition of the group's A PREGNANT WOMAN'S GUIDE TO HARRISBURG is now available. These booklets were originally compiled last year to assist women in dealing with their pregnancy.

Women from the HWRM come from various experiences in pregnancy but they found one thing in common: they all had had a difficult time in discovering what options were open to them, whether or not they chose to carry the pregnancy to full term. Accurate information about the options, and what doctors and hospitals' policies were in dealing with those options were very hard to learn. After going through a tremendous amount of red tape to complete the booklet, they realized more than ever the need for such a volume.

Running throughout the entire booklet is the concept that the patient has a RIGHT to know what is being done to her, and suggested guidelines for choosing a doctor are included. Their patient's "bill of rights" states that any patient - pregnant or otherwise - has a RIGHT ... to know what's happening, to demand information, to determine the course of treatment, to refuse treatment, to request transferral of records from one doctor's office to another, and to know the generic names of drugs.

Major areas of information discussed include:

Harrisburg area obstetricians, gynecologists and a few practitioners, fees and opinions on natural childbirth and breastfeeding.

Fees and policies of the 6 area hospitals: presence of the father in the delivery room, rooming in, feeding on demand, and restrictions on Birth control methods, sterilization, and venereal disease, with references to agencies and doctors who are currently assisting in these areas of need

Copies of the booklet can be obtained by writing Ms. Bard: R.D. 3, Box 894, Fishing Creek Valley Road, Harrisburg, 17112 (please send 25 cents plus 24 cents postage for each booklet) or by attending Harrisburg Women's Movement meetings.

Good Cop Story

New York, New York (CPS) -- It's hard enough in New York to find the sun, let alone a secluded backyard to dry out a healthy marijuana plant. So the flat-dwelling people about which this story is written had hung their beloved greenery in a prominent position in their living room to achieve the desired effect.

And of course New York being the violent metropolis it is, these good people were not so overwhelmed by an incidence of rape in the lobby of their building. They rescued the unfortunate victim and took her into their abode, calming her with coffee and kind words, until the notified police officer arrived.

However, it was not until the officer was in the very same room as the plant, that the occupants realized their unfortunate position.

One of them made a vain attempt to stand in front of the plant-- but too late. The police officer marched over to him, placed a hand on his shoulder and said: "You shouldn't hang that in here, it will get mildewed."
