

There is a change in registration policy, according to Mr. James C. Thorne, Records, Registration and Scheduling Officer in Capitol's Office of Academic Services.

The change involves the number of courses a student is able to list for preference during pre-registration advisement. Usually, three was the maximum as specified on the No. 2 card in the registration packet. Now, students, with concurrence from their advisors, may fill in as many courses as they desire. Courses should be listed in order of preference, including different sections of each course.

"This change should solve about 90 per cent of registration hassles," Thorne states. "The new policy will all but eliminate the possibility of a student being closed out of a course." Thorne adds that 12th, then 11th, and 10th term students receive priority in course selection.

"For example, a student may receive the first two courses he specified, but may be closed out of the third, due to the priority given seniors. But because he listed a fourth and fifth course, he is guaranteed a spot. This procedure will eliminate the delay of seeing an advisor in the registration line. I think it is something for the good of both students and advisors," he adds.

Following is an example of how a No. 2 card should be filled out during advisement, November 16-22.

Difference between Campus and Regular Police

Buffalo, New York (CPS) -- "Campus Cops" aren't cops at all, a New York judge has determined.

Judge William Ostrowski made the distinction between "peace officer" and "security officer" recently when he dismissed charges of disorderly conduct, third degree assault and resisting arrest against a student at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

The judge cited a recent ruling by the SUNY Board of Trustees which declared that security officers employed by the university are not authorized to arrest an individual.

According to Ostrowski, security officers can only "issue and serve a simplified traffic information and appearance ticket."

Because arrests can only be made by "those deemed peace officers," Judge Ostrowski ruled that Jim Britt, the SUNY security officer in question, was not employed to place the defendant, L.C. Smith, under arrest or charge him with resisting arrest.

The case which fostered the decision began last summer when Smith allegedly refused to produce identification upon entering a dormitory on the Buffalo campus. An argument between Smith and a security aide ensued. Britt intervened and asked Smith for identification. After another verbal exchange, a physical confrontation reportedly took place between the two, culminating in Smith's arrest.

Contending that Judge Ostrowski ruled on a discrepancy in the language, Lee Griffin, assistant director of campus security at SUNY at Buffalo, said he is certain that the district attorney will appeal the decision. Griffin claimed that the law clearly states security officers have peace officer powers.

Griffin also said that the security officers in the SUNY system would continue to act as peace officers "until the Trustees clarify the law one way or the other," in writing.
