

Presidents Council strives to help clubs

by R. W. Bonaker

On November 16, the Presidents Council of Capitol Campus staged its final meeting of the fall term. John Sheridan, vice-president of the Student Government Association, presided at the meeting.

Eileen Grady, representing the Campus/Community Service Committee of the SGA, asked for help in producing a Christmas party for the children of Capitol Campus Village. She stated that over 100 children aged 2 to 12 reside in the complex. Eileen asked for manpower, toys and monetary donations from each of the two dozen organizations represented. The consensus was favorable to aiding the committee but most people expressed the necessity to go back to their respective organizations before committing themselves. The party is tentatively scheduled for Saturday, December 2, in the Recreation/Athletics Building.

Sheridan appointed Debra Young secretary of the Council before undertaking the task of reports of activities from individual organizations. The Beta Chi Society (Business Club) will continue its current activities of guest speakers, social events and tours. The Black Student Union announced that its arts center and lounge is a gathering place for all students. The B.S.U. will have a dance tomorrow night in the Student Center. It will also stage a Black Cultural Arts Festival during the spring term.

The CAPITOLITE, the campus yearbook, will have an additional sale during the opening weeks of the winter term 1973. Seniors are requested to send their portraits to the processor as soon as possible. Another portrait sitting has been setup for the winter term. The Chess Club has staged a round-robin elimination tournament for all those interested. Pennsylvania Champ, Mike Shahade plans to stage another exhibition during the winter. Delta Tau Kappa, the international social science honor society, plans a membership drive during the winter term. It also plans a state government oriented seminar as well as its traditional spring banquet. Student-to-student advising will be set up for the winter term. Members are also publishing an information bulletin for its graduating members and other service projects. The Drama Club will present its first play of the year today at 12:15 and 8 PM. The first performance will be in the Gallery Lounge, the second in the Auditorium. The club is also in the process of restructuring its organizational process.

The Head Shop is continuing its purpose to strengthen intra-campus communication. It achieves this through the Hot-line counseling service, communal dinners, a drug information walk-in center, and counseling of drug-troubled area high school students. Hillel, and organization for Jewish students, recently underwent re-organization. It also plans to sponsor a Chanukah party and morning brunch get-togethers. I.E.E.E. will continue its policy of having open meetings and inviting speakers for the enjoyment of all students. I.T.E.

also has plans for more speakers for the give-and-take of information and ideas and will attend a regional "mapping" conference during the spring. The Meade Heights Board of Governors will continue its role to serve the daily needs of resident students and plans a major event during the spring term. The student PSEA has immediate plans to assist in the staging of the Christmas party. It will stage a dance during the winter and will attend a conference which features Pennsylvania Secretary of Education, John Pittenger.

The XGI's have established a program for the betterment of the Vietnam Veteran. They are sponsoring a blood drive which is being staged today. They will be working with the Counseling Center to organize a campus work study program, including information on veterans preference, but open to any student. They will also hold periodical keggers.

The Young Democratic Organization of the campus plans to bring speakers to campus and is willing to work with other clubs to achieve that goal. They plan to sponsor a block party in the spring and to sponsor political activities during the SGA spring elections. Off campus, they plan to work for local candidates during the primary campaigns. The campus College Republican Council plans to merge with another organization to better coordinate a few of their activities. The Do-Nothing Club plans to work with the Sigma Chi sorority in sponsoring a rummage sale which took place this week.

The University Apartments organization recently elected its new officers. They plan a social function to be held during the winter break over Christmas. The organization is in the process of forming a food co-op, publishing a leaflet of information of where and how to buy fresh food in bulk for low cost. The Photo Club plans a showing for each term and will sponsor a photography field day during the winter term. The campus literary magazine TARNHELM will publish two editions, one each in the remaining academic terms. Tim Jacobs, an editor of the magazine, mentioned the possibility of merging the intercollegiate writers workshop and the magazine. The Resident Student Council, which offers a service similar to the Meade Heights Board of Governors, coordinates many of the activities in the dormitories. The Council is currently striving to obtain shelves and hand dryers for the shower rooms and to purchase a radio for the dining hall. It will sponsor a holiday decorating contest, to begin soon.

Following the lengthy process of the organizational reports, revisions to the Constitution of the Presidents Council were approved by 14-5, easily achieving the 2/3 majority required. In other actions, the following four organizations have been referred to the Charter Review Committee of the SGA for investigation of their activities by a vote of 17-1-1: Booster Club, Christian Science Club, P.S.P.E., and the Woman's Club.
