

MCCABE & MRS. MILLER COMING UP WEDNESDAY

Credit Robert Altman's genius for this compelling, authentic portrait of the 1902 zinc mining town Presbyterian Church (named for the tallest building in town). Credit the muted ambiance of hazy smoky air; the bone-chilling blizzard; the haunting refrains of Leonard Cohen's ballads for recreating with startling accuracy the frontier myth of America's past. This is what the West was like, primitive, miserable, violent and full of despair. The atmosphere is perfectly captured in "McCabe & Mrs. Miller," playing Wednesday, February 21, 1973 at 8:00 in the auditorium.

Robert Altman's film is a visual work of outstanding sensual beauty. Warren Beatty, in perhaps the most absorbing role of his career, stars as the grizzled, small-time gambler whose business is bringing pleasure to Presbyterian Church. Julie Christie stars as the hard-nosed madame who coerces him into setting her up in business and splitting the profits. When their prosperous enterprise attracts the local mobsters, Beatty's choice becomes that of selling out or getting shot.

Full of rich detail and powerful moodiness, "McCabe & Mrs. Miller" proves again that Robert Altman is a filmmaker of extraordinary talents.

Admission is 80 cents or 40 cents with an activities card.

Pat Bentley... Reserves rate too

by Mark Israel

On every team, in every sport, there are those athletes who don't get to play in games as often as others.

Probably the most popular name that can be applied to such athletes is reserved. Yet, despite lack of playing time, their role is just as important to a team as the starters.

One such ballplayer on the Capitol Campus Lions is Pat Bentley. Bentley doesn't look like an athlete at all, let alone a basketball player. Yet he, like all the other reserves on the team, contributes something just as important as points, rebounds and assists--attitude.

Bentley feels that it is his job to psyche everyone up for the game. He leads one of the most spirited pre-game warmups you'll ever see. He is a coach's dream when it comes to attitude. "The most important thing is the team, not me. Sitting on the bench doesn't bother me at all. I'd rather watch the game from the bench and see what we're doing wrong. Then, when I get a chance to go out there, I can try to correct it."

Bentley has played a key role in the astonishing improvement of the Lions this year. In comparing last year's team to this year's, he cited better personnel and better attitude as two key ingredients. "Last year, we just played. This year, we have a winning attitude. The only reason we go out on the court is to win. The only reason we put a uniform on--put our shoes on--is to win." He continued, "Last year, if somebody got down or had a bad night, it ended there. This year, if somebody gets down, somebody else is always there to pick him up."

Bentley attributes this tremendous change in attitude, and thus, the general improvement of the team, to Coach Al Williams. "The difference this year is coaching. 'The Coach' (that's the only way anyone on the team ever refers to Williams) brought us together and made us act like a college basketball team. He's like the father of a family of thirteen boys and he knows that all of us contribute something, or else he wouldn't let us wear the uniform."

Pat Bentley

Bentley feels that the win over Stevens Trade at Lancaster on February 2, was the make or break game for the Lions. He commented on that on the bus ride to Lancaster that night. "We've got to win one on the road. We've proved that we can win at home. If we can win this one on the road, we'll be set for the rest of the season. If we can win this one, we'll be in great shape mentally for the rematch against Spring Garden."

Among this year's highlights so far, Bentley rated the win over Schuylkill as the greatest. "It was a win for everybody but especially for the Coach. He worked so hard for that, and he deserved it." Other highlights were Tommy Ogden's 45-point night against WKBO, and the baskets scored by Jerry Baskoff and Dennis Hlavaty, two fellow reserves, in the win over Schuylkill. "I went over and hugged them both for it. I was so happy for them" remarked Bentley.

Some ball players score points, some grab rebounds, some pass off for assists, some play defense, and some just believe and make others believe. The next time you're at a game, look for No. 43, Pat Bentley, the 22-year old senior from Etna, Pennsylvania. You'll see spirit like you've never seen before.
