

So Long Mike and Mark

With this, the final issue of the winter term, we wave a tearful good-bye to two of our staff members; Co-Editor Mike Welliver and prominent staff writer Mark Israel.

Mike plans to return to his native Turbotville and run his father's auto body shop and hopes to gain another job before pulling up stakes and traveling throughout the U.S.A. for a year or two.

Mark, who has also served as acting Station Manager of WZAP, has landed a lucrative position in the public relations field with a corporation in Philadelphia.

I shall remember Mike, who has been my roommate for the past two years, as the sometimes happy, sometimes sad, but always unpredictable silver-toothed guy - an extremely close friend.

I'll remember Mark as the fun loving, articulate raconteur of Philadelphia sports, and as a leader of Nunzio's Raiders.

Being Co-Editor is not an easy job, and Mike stood up to the task admirably. He had received no journalist training prior to coming to Capitol, but he accepted the challenge and he saw it through. His news writing improved to a mark of proficiency. He got the knack of "pasting up" this weekly publication and is now able to compile four pages in under 90 minutes.

Mark attacked the chance of receiving an internship with Public Information Officer Betty Duke, and submitted several articles on new faculty members and on varsity basketball games. He developed a unique style of reporting that was enjoyable to read by placing himself in the story and at times using irreverently humorous comments.

I could continue my essay on the merits of these two fine gentlemen, but those merits are highly obvious to those who know them.

Others we know are also graduation; Carol, Maggie, Dale, Marty, Dan, Barry, Brenda (Spotts), Gale and countless others who should be given recognition.

To all of you, good luck, and remember us always. We are close on your heels.

Mr. Paul tells all!

Dear Editor,

Thanks for providing all the provocative dirt on Mr. Paul's present emotional status! I only wish you would have added some "groovy pix" and some "true confessions" while baring this poor man's soul once more.

Isn't there anything else to talk about on this campus?? Besides the immorality of continuously emasculating Capitol's security officer, the whole topic has become trite and tired.

I've lived in Meade Heights for two terms without traumatic confrontation with this "Paramilitary" monster! Soon I expect to see, in print, along with the results of his TAT's and Rorschach's an in-depth report of how many times he wipes his ass.

Laugh off, huh?

Thanks for the space!

Diligent Dupes Dime-eater

Here's a special 3-toke interpretation of some late sport's news to reach our desk.

Hey sports enthusiasts! Hold the presses for a big news break!

Seems as though a recent issue of The Capitolist forgot to mention the name of Dave "Diligent" Link as one of the winners of the pinball tournament held recently in Venderville.

Yes indeed, ole Diligent Dave, one of the true unsung heroes of every Gottlieb fantasy, danced gumcracked, wheezed, whistled, and flipped his way to an impressive victory over an electronic thief known as the "flying Carpet." Spectators swooned and gasped as Dave's fleeting phlang floated to a flamboyant display of flipper finesse.

When the final flames of war between man and machine died away, good ole Diligent stood amidst the smoke and dust, his war smudged face sporting an ear-to-hair covered smile of victory.

Pinball wizards come and go with every blown circuit and wedged flipper, but Capitol Campus will not soon forget "The Day Diligent Dave Devastated The Deadly Dime Devourer of Dauphin County." By the way, "Ole Lucky Pinkies Link" won a fantastic, far out, flipped out, upped-downed new record album. After the presentation of the prize album "Diligent Dave" uttered a few sterling remarks to his fans, something about 'Anybody got change for a $3 dollar bill? I think I'm in love with the "flying Carpet."

And so, anyone hovering around Venderville can still hear and see the ferocious fervor of "squeaking sneakers Link" hard at work at what he loves to do most, plunder a pinball machine. Congrats to you, Diligent. Keeps those fingers loose.
