You could really get off being in our shoes,
You used to be sold on rhythm and blues,
Well I heard of a place at the back of town
Where you really kick the shit when the sun goes down;

So -

"With a little help from your friends" -
Capitol is gettin' down again -
Every hour on the hour - dances, films, speakers, sports (inter & intra) -
And for those who slosh pub fashion - Keggars

So -

Check your campus calendar -
Find your high and let 'er rip.
Wubs, pubs, and nubs are gettin' it on.
(There's even a rumour that Benny and the Jets hang their shingle at the Student Center)

Mental Ills Cause Most Childhood Disabilities

Retardation and other mental disorders are the most common affliction among some 260,000 people 18 and over who are getting social security "childhood disability" benefits, according to social security officials here.

Childhood disability payments go to people who have been disabled from childhood (before age 18) if one of the parents eligible for social security benefits retires, becomes disabled, or dies.

A study by social security showed that 65 percent of the 260,000 people getting these benefits are disabled because of mental disorders, a spokesman said. In 1957, mental disorders accounted for 47 percent of the total.

Most of the rest of the childhood disability group suffer physical diseases of the nervous system and sense organs, the study shows.

Childhood disability is defined as "severe impairment that occurs before 18, prevents substantial gainful employment, has lasted for 12 consecutive months, or is expected to last for 12 consecutive months, or is expected to result in death," the social security spokesman said.

During an 8-year period covered by the study, only 10 percent of all childhood disability beneficiaries stopped receiving social security payments. "About 6 percent of them died," the spokesman said. "About 2 percent married and became ineligible for benefits. About 1 percent showed physical or mental improvement enough to be no longer classified as disabled."

Social security began disability payments in 1954.

The majority of childhood disability beneficiaries have been handicapped since birth, or early childhood, according to the study. Half are 30 years old or more. About one-fourth are 18 or 19, and about 90 percent of that group have received social security benefits before they were 18 as dependents of retired, disabled, or deceased workers, the spokesman said.

The average childhood disability payment from social security is about $73 a month.
