An Ending, Near The Middle

by P.R.J. Smith

Her whisper rustled, cool like silk.

"It's almost time to go."

The babysitter couldn't stay all night, so she had to go home. She was already a little late, it would mean an extra dollar. I thought to offer her some money, but I knew she would refuse, and the implications in that offer might drive us farther apart.

I kissed her once more, and then let her untangle herself from me, pulling arm from arm, leg from leg, dissolving our sticky knot.

She collected her clothes from the floor and went into the bathroom to dress. It seem ludicrous to me that she should hide herself like a school-girl to daintily cover herself; for her to remove her body from my eyes. I wanted to watch her dress, to see the cloth slip down over her head, become caught for a moment on those lovely breasts I had so recently fondled with my eyes, my hands, my mouth. See the dress drop lower until even her fertile delta was hidden by its folds.

She came out and put on her shoes.

I saw her to the door, my nudity insulting her clothes and making them seem much heavier, more oppressive than they actually were.

She seemed upset. She didn't want to go. The memory of her husband running away without a word made any departure difficult for her. She hated endings. She looked into my eyes, she said she loved me.

She kissed me and was gone.

Down the street, I heard a car door close, an engine start - stall once, start again and move, drifting away until there was silence.

I went back to bed, this time to sleep. Tomorrow, I would go to work an hour early.

It would mean an extra dollar.

Last Week In Soccer

by Gene T. Eddy

Host Capitol Campus built up a 5:0 halftime lead against visiting Lancaster Bible College, but saw it slip away due to second half substitutions. Coach Ed Trunk started substituting in order to give his reserves some experience, but the momentum of the game which was all Capitol's in the first half, switched to an ignited Lancaster team. The sparkplug for LBC was Joe Nixon, who scored all five goals on short driving shots. The first half lead was built up by Mounir Azar, who had three goals and John Harris, who scored two. Mounir scored the first goal for Capitol after an assist by Ed Mirabello. He then beat the right fullback for LBC after the goalie was pulled out of the net for his second goal. John Harris assisted Mounir Azar's third goal and Azar returned the favor to Harris by assisting John for the fourth goal of the evening for Capitol. The fifth and what proved to be the last goal of the evening, came from John Harris after a lofted corner kick by Ed Mirabello. Rick Burnfield, the goalie for Capitol, made two dramatic saves to hold Lancaster Bible College scoreless for the first half. Capitol (2-3-2) after the 5-5 tie to Lancaster Bible College (6-5-4) has to be a little disappointed. Earlier in the week, Capitol hosted an excellent Spring Garden College team, who walked away with an 11-1 victory. Tom Plank scored the lone goal for Capitol on a direct kick penalty, set up by SG's left fullback handling a ball kicked by Capitol's Scott Deardorff. The last home game for Capitol against Valley Forge College was played on Tuesday of this week and the results of that game can be found in next week's issue of the C.C. READER. The mismatch of the year had to be the game with Spring Garden College, who plays teams with the caliber of Howard University. Coached by Jose Monras, a former collegiate All-American, Spring Garden College played with the efficiency of a well disciplined team. Incidentally, the Lancaster Bible College vs. Capitol Campus game saw the largest turnout ever at a soccer game this season. It's good to see that it is finally receiving the attention it deserves.

Attention!

All interested persons are invited to view a short audio-video tape and "overhear" a telephone conference exchange with Ambassador Nathaniel Davis, Director General of the Foreign Service, Room 216, Monday, Nov. 11, at 10:50 a.m. The invitation is extended by Professor Heindel and his class in U. S. Diplomatic History. Among many interesting posts, Ambassador Davis was Ambassador to Chile since 1971. He has served in many critical posts and has a Ph.D. from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.
