

Jamie Brockett In Concert Tuesday

Jaime Brockett, a talented folk singer from Boston, is making his first appearance at Capitol Campus on Tuesday, Jan. 21st at 8 PM in the Student Center.

Mr. Brockett is an adept musician, playing 6 and 12 string guitar, dulcimer, banjo and autoharp. He sings material ranging from quiet, melodic love songs to political satire.

On the quiet songs, such as "Remember the Wind and the Rain", his voice is low and breathy. On the uptempo songs, his singing is nasal and sardonic. When he sings political satire, as "Talking Green Beret New Super Yellow Hydraulic Banana Teeny Bopper Blues", he manages the unusual feat for protest song of avoiding the overly obvious.

JAIME BROCKETT, CAPITOL RECORDING ARTIST WILL APPEAR IN CONCERT TUESDAY, JANUARY 21ST AT 8 PM IN THE STUDENT CENTER.

Mr. Brockett integrates his singing with instrumentals such as bluegrass banjo songs and an often fascinating stream of talk on most any subject that comes to mind. This is no small feat, either.

The mixture of drugs and music has produced more than San Francisco rock. It has also made for some of the least relevant, longest and most boring between-song monologues ever heard on stage. A performer like Jamie Brockett who can rap and still be interesting and amusing is always needed.

"Jamie Brockett in Concert" is sponsored by the Social Committee and Friends. Admission - students $2.00. HOPE TO SEE YOU THERE FOR AN EVENING OF MUSIC AND SONG.

Based On 'Ascent Of Man' Series CC Offers TV Course

A college course based on a television series is being offered at Penn State Capitol Campus starting in January. "The Ascent of Man," a 13 part television series created by Dr. Jacob Bronowski, is a survey of intellectual achievements which highlight mankind's attempts to understand nature.

The television programs were filmed in 27 countries. The purpose of the film was to present the history of man as seen through science.

In addition to the television programs, the course includes study guides, texts, a special series of instructional supplements on audio-tape, and three workshops.

The thirteen-part series is aired on WITF-TV Channel 33 beginning Tuesday, January 7, 1975 at 8:30 PM. Repeat broadcasts will be held each week on Saturdays at 8:00 PM.

Workshops will be held on Saturdays, February 8, March 8, and April 12. Dr. Michael Barton, Assistant Professor of Social Science and Anthropology and Dr. Thomas Knight, Associate Professor of Social Science and History are the directors of the workshops.

Black Troupe To Perform Here

Yusef Iman and the Weusi Kuumba Troupe will appear tonight at the Student Center at 8 PM presenting a program on Black Culture and the arts.

Yusef Iman and the Weusi Kuumba Troupe, Black performers from New York City, will appear at Penn State-Capitol Campus in Middletown on Friday, Jan. 17. The free performance which begins at 8 p.m. in the Student Center is open to the public.

The Troupe has developed a program which emphasized Black Creativity. Keeping with this tradition, the program will highlight dances of West and South Africa. Poetry and music will be performed by a chorus of the artists.

Yusef Iman, director of the Troupe, is a singer, actor, poet and writer. He recently directed "7 Principles Plus" at the East Theatre in Brooklyn. Much of the material performed by the Weusi Kuumba Troupe is the creation of Yusef Iman himself.

Pennsylvania State University-Capitol Campus conferred degrees to 94 students, Saturday, December 21. The fall term commencement ceremonies were held at the Middletown Area High School.

Bachelor degrees were awarded to 69 students and master degrees were bestowed on 25 students. The Master degrees were earned in Administration, American Studies, Elementary Education, Engineering, Humanities, Public Administration, and Regional Planning. The Bachelor degrees were earned in Business Administration, Elementary Education, Humanities, Mathematical Science, Social Science, CIVIL Engineering, Electrical Design, and Mechanical Design Engineering Technology.

Dr. George D. Wolf, dean of the faculty, spoke to the graduates. The theme of his remarks came from Robert Frost's poem "The Road Not Taken." Dr. Wolf pointed out that even in an urbanized, technological society, a person can make a choice for "the less traveled road. The choices are not only vocational ones," Dr. Wolf stated, "but about the kind of person you will be."

Two graduating seniors were honored for attaining a 4.0 average. Lynn A. Musser and Sarko O. Keosheyian, bot graduate in Mathematical Science and both from Harrisburg, were the honored scholars.

Dr. Robert E. McDermott provost of Penn State-Capitol Campus, presided at the graduation. He was assisted in conferring the degrees by Harry R. Ulrich, a member of the Board of Trustees. Dr. James B. Bartoo, dean of the Graduate School, Dr. George D. Wolf, and Dr. Roger B. Saylor, commencement marshal also participated in the ceremonies.

Kessler On Exhibition

A special art exhibit ushered in the new year at Penn State-Capitol Campus. "Paintings" by Dale Kessler are being exhibited in the Gallery Lounge in the main building from January 1, 1975 to January 24, 1975.

Mr. Kessler describes his art as color field painting. He considers scale important and his current paintings are more non-geometric compared with his earlier geometric style.

Mr. Kessler, who resides in Herndon, has had many one man exhibits throughout New York and Pennsylvania. He has shown his art at the Waldorf Astoria and the Union Carbide Building in New York, the William Penn Museum and the Gallery Doshi in Harrisburg, and the Philadelphia Civic Center.

Mr. Kessler is presently teaching art for the Line Mountain School District.

OUR COVER STORY
Recession Hits Portable Outhouse Association:
[Earth News] --A measure of the nation's woes is the sluggish condition of the National Portable Sanitation Association, which represents some 173 manufacturers of portable toilets--the kind you see around construction sites. According to Larry Miller, the association's director in Washington, the nationwide market for portable outhouses was down 30 to 40 percent last year, due largely to constipation in the building industry, and to the shitty state of the nation's economy.
