June Gloom Faces Grads

[Earth News] --June graduates are going to have a worse time than ever getting jobs, according to the College Placement Council's annual winter employer poll.

The poll shows an unexpected 4 percent drop in job openings this June as compared to a year ago. It's the first overall drop in four years.

While engineers will probably have 7 percent more job offers than a year ago, the poll predicts that a total of only 4 percent of the graduates in the humanities and social sciences are likely to find jobs in their own fields.

It's equally dismal for new Ph.D.'s who will be getting 17 percent fewer job offers this June than last year.

That's Good!

7. How about keeping the library open until midnight instead of 10:00 PM. If not for the entire term, then at least for mid-terms and finals This has been the procedure at many other campuses. University Park libraries are open until 2:00 AM for mid-term and finals.

This suggestion has been referred to the Library Committee to be discussed.

8. Complaint on parking permits by education majors, who spend three weeks a term away from school.

This idea will be discussed at the next S.G.A. meeting.

9. Courses equivalent to Capitol Campus courses are not acceptable for advanced credit.

This matter should be discussed with your department head. There are ways in which this problem can be solved, i.e. there are tests that can be taken to receive credit for a course.
