

New S-A Coordinator Comments on Duties

by Phyllis Schaeffer

In an exclusive interview with the C.C. Reader, Roberta McLeod the new student activities coordinator, commented on the two-fold responsibilities of her position--assisting students in any way she can with their activities and establishing lines of communication with the community.

Ms. McLeod came to Capitol from Queen's College in New York where she was involved with both the campus and community as program director of activities.

With her experience in the student affairs field and her active file on such performing groups as bands and dramatic companies, Ms. McLeod sees herself as a "resource person" for those students planning activities while working with them to try to save money. She does not feel students have to take her opinion, however.

Since her arrival at Capitol on Jan 20, Ms. McLeod has been working with Jerry South, director of student affairs, on the Cultural Program Series and with students on Casino Night.

Some of her goals for student activities at Capitol are: to revitalize the Student Center making it a nerve center of the campus and to investigate advertising techniques for activities.

Financial aspects aside, Ms. McLeod believes the success of a program can best be judged by the audience's response and not merely its size.

She majored in biology and physical education at Hampton Institute in Va. She has done graduate work at Indiana and Rutgers Universities and hopes to complete her master's program in public administration at Penn State.

Having come to the wide open spaces from New York, Ms. McLeod says her "eyes aren't burning now from the pollution" of the big city. She describes herself as an outdoor person who likes to hike, swim and ride horseback.

Her work experience also includes teaching at the Newark Boys Chorus School, an elementary and junior high school specializing in music. She toured with the chorus as a traveling tutor for the boys. Ms. McLeod said the Newark Boys Chorus will be appearing at University Park in the spring.

The Seven Veils

by Susan Wohlbruck

*The dancer is no ballerina
Sorry you misunderstood.*

*I dance for your head,
The dance of the seven veils*

*Whirling, I unveil
For your pleasure, slowly*

One veil comes off only To reveal another.

*I dance gayly, wantonly
For your head, unsevered.*

PSU ANIMAL POLICY

A friendly note: you can get busted for not having your dog on a leash. Read further details below. photo by prouser

The presence of animals on University property has had, in many cases, an adverse effect on the normal functions of the University by causing bodily harm to individuals, unsanitary conditions in University buildings and facilities, and nuisances.

Because of these existing conditions, the Office of the Vice President of Business has issued the following policy governing the control of animals on University property, effective immediately:

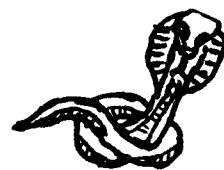

- A. No person owning or having under his control any animal shall permit such animal to be brought upon the property of The Pennsylvania State University without having a leash or lead suitably attached to the animal and held by the person responsible, except in designated hunting areas.
- B. No person shall tether an animal to any fence, tree, shrub, post, or other object located upon the lands of The Pennsylvania State University, not designed for the purpose of securing animals.

- C. No person shall bring any animal into any University building or permit the animal on any University public transportation facility. The foregoing shall not apply to seeing eye dogs, to authorized research conducted by a University department, to an animal hospital, or to a shelter designed and constructed to house animals.
- D. Sanctions

- 1. A person having an animal in a building or on the property in violation of these regulations and who refuses to comply with the regulations upon request of a responsible person is subject to arrest for trespass if he fails to depart the property.
- 2. A person who allows an animal to run at large upon the property in violation of the Pennsylvania "Dog Law of 1965" is subject to citation for such violation.
- 3. An animal tethered and unattended upon the property of the University in violation of these regulations will be impounded by the Department of Safety and released to a local animal hospital. The owner will be responsible for any costs incurred.

If the owner cannot be located within a period of three days, the animal will be turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Reader Munchie Review

PILLSBURY'S
HUNGRY JACK
MICROWAVE POPCORN
PATENT APPLIED FOR

The munchies came upon me one Sunday evening. Making my way to the nearest 7-11, I entered to find the ultimate in munchies - Microwave popcorn. A neatly folded red and white bag lay inside the refrigerator case. I thought that it was a joke-microwave popcorn. Proceeding to the checkout counter with my neatly folded red and white bag of microwave popcorn in one hand and 35 cents in the other, I patiently waited for the miracle of microwave popcorn.

The clerk took the bag, put it in the oven and after a few minutes came back with, you guessed it, microwave popcorn. He admonished, "be careful when you open the bag-the steam will burn you." Thanking him for his warning - I tested the popcorn with a friend.

Our conclusion: as good, if not better, than movie popcorn. Now, if they can only come out with a buttered microwave popcorn, Pillsbury will have the popcorn business cornered.

But then I thought, pity the poor old fashioned popcorn machines. They have had their last pop, and have gone the way of the 5 cent candy bar and the 8 cent stamp. That's life and progress for you!
