Lenny Bruce to explain the success of Las Vegas.

Prouser said further, "The orientation in the advertising for Casino Night was sexual. Nytza was used as a drawing card on a predominately male campus".

Commenting on the charges by DeLong, Prouser said, "I just think the charges were poorly written. Who determines 'bad taste'? 'Slanderous implications' is vague".

As for the Reader's complaint, Prouser stated, "We want a meeting of the Board and are expecting it. We just want to straighten out what the Board can and cannot do and to define its duties and powers. No one on campus should have the right to remove papers".

In an interview with McLeod on March 28, she said, "There will be a meeting next week to discuss the functions and scope of the Media Board and its position on campus".

McLeod said, "I was personally offended" with the Reader's coverage (Nytza is a friend of McLeod's) and "concerned about the legal implications.

misconception of Nytza. She is a belly dancer, not a stripper. Belly dancing is an art form".

On Casino Night she said, "It was the first social event that the Provost and his wife attended, professors, students, and children. The community donated the prizes, nothing was bought. All the student organizations got together to put on Casino Night".

Bollinger said of the Reader coverage, "I disliked having to play up the belly dancer, but we are short-staffed and we had no story. (The assigned reporter was unable to cover the event). Personally, I felt there was no problem with civil action. The advertisements did lure guys to come and spend money. It was played up for fun and games".

Both Jerry South, director of student affairs, and McLeod disclaimed any possible censorship attempts by the Media Board. South called it a "support organization that has never stepped into the internal operations of student media". McLeod described the board as "advisory".
