Capitol Campus will be among the 150 colleges throughout the United States sending delegations to the National Model United Nations to be held in New York City, April 22-26, 1975.

The National Model U.N. began 49 years ago at Harvard University as a model of the League of Nations. Since then the conference has remained dedicated to its original purpose of educating college students about international affairs.

At the conference delegates take on the roles of professional diplomats. Delegates become participants at an international conference. They work with other delegates trying to achieve their own national objectives while fostering the necessary consensus for the desired international action. Intra-delegate relationships reflect the political realities in the world.

The delegation from Capitol will be representing the Republic of Niger. Niger, a landlocked nation, is the largest state in West Africa and one of the most sparsely populated states on the African continent.

The structure of the NMUN is modeled after the U.N. system with meetings of the General Assembly, Plenary Conferences and Special General Assembly Sessions, Economic and Social Council and Security Council. There will be General Assembly meetings along with three committee sessions. The committee sessions are: Political Committee, Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee and Legal Committee. In addition, there are conferences on Multinational Corporations, World Disarmament and a Special Session of the General Assembly on Raw Materials.

Don Carter who is a senior in the International Studies Program will be Capitol's delegate to the Political and Security Committee. This committee will deal with the issues of International Peace and Security, Peacekeeping and the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace.

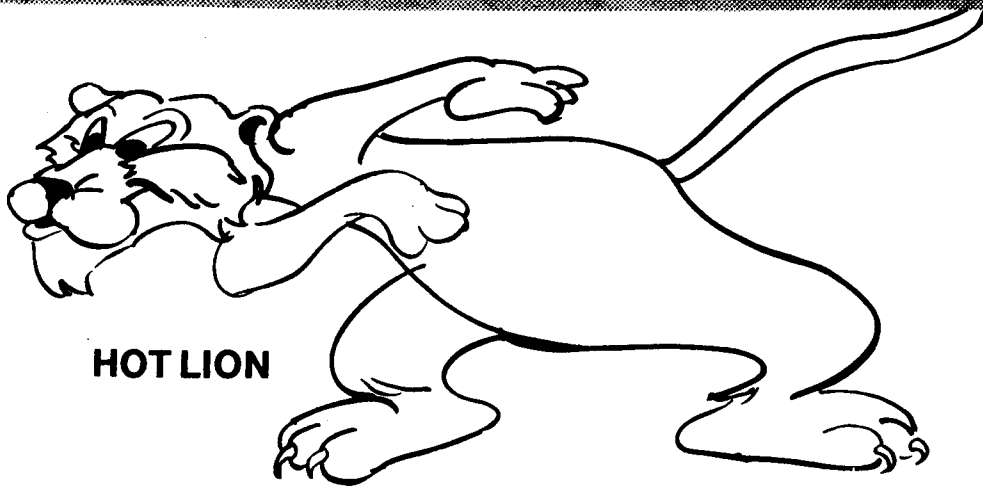

The delegate to the Legal Committee will be Greg Miely, a junior in the Public Policy Program. The Legal committee will be considering two relatively recent issues: The Conference of the Law of the Sea and International Terrorism.

Eileen Hogg, a senior at Capitol in the Psycho-Social Option will be the delegate to the Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee and will be dealing with three topics which are not only very current, but also carry overtones of serious political consequence. They are: Palestinian Refugees; Apartheid in South Africa; and the Status of Women.

Capitol's delegate representing Niger in the Conferences concerning Raw Materials and Multi-National corporations will be Sue Bretherick, a junior in the Public Policy Program. The main thrust of the conference on Raw materials is to develop a means to supply raw materials equitably throughout the world, to have developed nations help developing nations and to alleviate the food crisis.

Clem Gilpin, Instructor, of Afro-American Studies is the faculty advisor to Capitol's delegation and has been working with and directing the students in their research. In order to help the students prepare themselves to express the actual views that Niger would take on the various issues to be debated, Prof. Gilpin arranged an appointment with M. Diombi Moussa, the Financial Attache of the Embassy of Niger in Washington, D.C. On Wednesday, April 2nd, they visited the Embassy and spent an hour discussing various key issues with the Attache. They also visited with the Peace Corp coordinator for volunteers to West Africa (Particularly Niger, Mal & Chad) and stopped at the African desk of the U.N. Information Office in Washington.

The group will depart for New York on Tuesday, April 22nd and will return on April 26th. They will be staying at the Statler Hilton and will be attending sessions at the U.N. Complex.
