Can't Get High, With Your Kite, Anyway

Rear C.C. Reader;

Greetings from high atop Wrisberg Hall to all of you, especially our penpals No-Tel-Motel, the Trekkies, Mr. Olsen, Brown eyes, etc. We finally rewrote our letter of several weeks past so without further adue; here it is;

If any anyone ever tells you to go fly a kite you better tell them to go shove their kite! Legally that's about all you can do with it at this location. It seems that there are many restrictions on kite flying which could put a good number of seemingly innocent kite flyers in the slammer!! Well to make a short story long we might just as well tell the story from the start.

A few weeks ago, one Wednesday afternoon we felt industrious and decided to find something to do that was new, interesting, and adventurous. Well after considerable thought we decided there wasn't much to do but fly a kite, so we did. Since it was a nice breezy day we were very successful in launching our kite and before long we had extended every bit of string we had into the air, about 1,000 feet. Soon afterwards a security officer came along and told us the kite had to come down because it was too close to the airport. Not wanting to cause any trouble we promptly retrieved the kite but we were determined to find out just what laws we might be breaking. The next day we went to the library but found only a general outline to FAA rules and regulations which told us that there was something pertaining to kites but there was not text. We then called the FAA office in Harrisburg where the gentleman was most cooperative and spent some time to find an answer to our question. As it turned out we discovered these particular regulations:

-A kite or other moored object can not be flown within five miles of any airport unless it is no higher than the tallest structure within two hundred feet of the flyer.

-A kite can never be flown more than five hundred feet into the air and if there are clouds present the kite cannot be within one hundred feet of the lowest clouds.

-A kite string may not extend over a power transmission line.

-If one is flying a kite on which a person is riding i.e. a skiing kite or one moored to a car, there are no regulations covering this type of kite.

After looking over these few regulations (there are more), you can see that many kite flyers have exceeded some of these limits. So what can we say except don't get too high!!!

'Wharton Avenue Rebellion'

Dear Editor.

I am a member of the "Wharton Avenue Rebellion". When this term started, I found that I was too broke to pay the $7.50 for a parking sticker. So, in order to dodge a fine by the Gustapo, I started to park on Wharton Ave. That short walk to and from the main building is a brisk and refreshing stimulant before classes. The walking distance is not that much farther than the main lot to class.

How can anyone justify paying $7.50 and getting ripped-off by Penn State? Just what in the hell do they offer for that money? No way is all that money being used to improve and maintain Capitol Campus's parking facilities. Must of that money goes to a central fund for parking lots throughout the entire Penn State system, including University Park. How Absurd!!!

Here's a challenge to the new student government officers; Get rid of that $7.50 parking fee, or insist upon a penny by penny accounting of every cent of that money--to be invested ONLY AT CAPITOL CAMPUS.

We have been ripped-off long enough. What's this I hear about Penn State being a non-profit system? With the way their going, we'll soon have to pay to get into the bathrooms. Then once we're in, there might be a charge for toilet paper--by the sheet. I have had enough!!!

Sincerely in a state of Wharton,
Gary B. Macchioni

We, the high class society of Capitol Campus, would like to commend this fine establishment for satisfying the needs of our students. There has been many a night we have spent there that chips, pretzels, and other fine foods that go hand & hand with beer have been passed out on the house. The proprietor has never treated us in any other way, but first class. So fellow students take heed and channel your thirst to this outstanding cultural establishment.
