

Collegiate Journalism Changing

Long Beach, Calif. [I.P.]

In an attempt to get the California State University, Long Beach, Department of Journalism accredited, a compromise to establish a laboratory student newspaper by Sept. 1, 1975 has been agreed upon by administrators, Associated Students' officers and representatives of the "Forty-Niner."

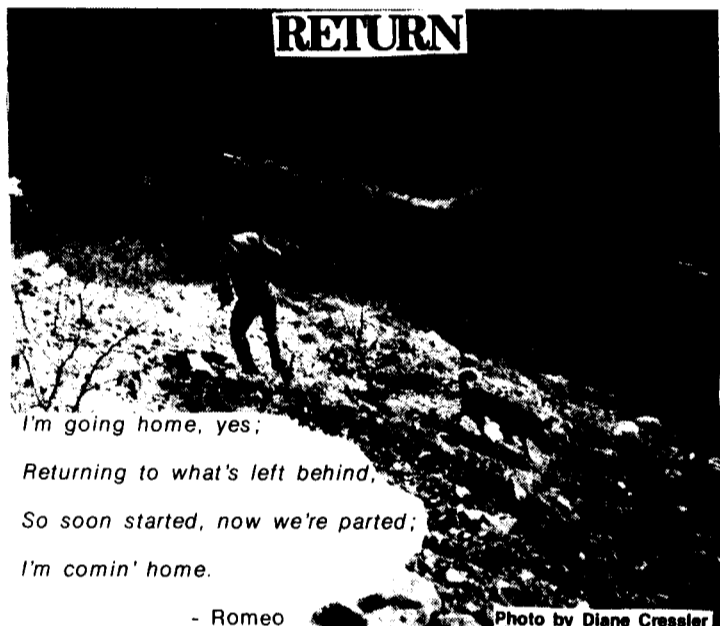

M.L. Stein, chairman of the department, explained in a memo clarifying the compromise. According to the memo, the editorial director can prevent publication only "for reasons of possible libel, obscenity, good taste and the failure of any item to meet professional journalistic standards."

Jim Tortolano, editor-in-chief for the spring semester, isn't completely satisfied with this item and feels it needs more specific definition as to "good taste" and "professional journalistic standards."

As a second item of the compromise, a board, consisting of three faculty members and two journalism students, will be established to determine the newspaper's policy and editorial routine. A separate, student-dominated board will determine the editorial content of the newspaper.

The lab newspaper is only one phase of many to ready the department for accreditation by the American Council for Education in Journalism. Stein considers the change essential. "I felt that the Journalism Department could not continue to give academic credit for (student work on) the Forty-Niner unless there was faculty supervision," he said. "I can't justify giving up to six units when student reporters are supervised and edited by other students."

RETURN

I'm going home, yes;
Returning to what's left behind,
So soon started, now we're parted;
I'm comin' home.

REMEMBER SAIGON

I remember a few years ago when I was in Saigon.
When I was in a trench fighting the Viet Cong.
And then, I used to ask myself many times why am I here?
Because my home is nowhere near.

My country finally decided to get me out of that place,
The one of bloody disgrace.
I still remember many of my friends lying there dead,
Some of them, with a bullet put through their head.

I remember the hard work that I have done,
But it is worse there now, than before I began.
Why? Because the fighting has started again,
And I wonder if we're going back, and if so, when?
