Oregon Students Gain Rights

(CPS)--In a move that could affect the entire nature of academic decision making, the Oregon legislature passed a bill in early June guaranteeing students a more extensive role in collective bargaining than they have won in any other state.

Previously, students across the country have been allowed to observe collective bargaining negotiations between their faculties and administrations with the permission of both parties. But that permission has often vanished, leaving students outside the bargaining room door while the parties inside decided issues that directly affected tuition, class size and governance rights.

Last March, Montana became the first state to guarantee students a place at the bargaining table as members of the management team. The Oregon bill does not tie students to any one side, and allows them to speak as "third parties" in the negotiations.

According to the provisions of the bill, at each campus where bargaining occurs students may choose three representatives to attend bargaining sessions who would (1) have access to all written documents, (2) be permitted to comment at any time during the talks and (3) be able to meet and confer with both parties during the sessions.

Students would be required to maintain the confidentiality of the negotiations and would not be able to veto the final contract. They also would not be guaranteed a spot on any pre-negotiation committees that would determine what issues would be bargained.

Passed in the final days of an extended session of the state legislature, the bill's last-minute success was due to a concentrated effort by the seven Oregon state system schools which make up the Associated Oregon Student Lobby (AOSL).

Because political beliefs within the student lobby itself varied widely, said Keith Lamoreux of the AOSL chapter at Portland State University, students were able to successfully sway both Republican and Democratic legislators to support the bargaining bill. In addition the student lobby won endorsements from two local teacher unions and three campus presidents.

Despite the bill's overwhelming passage by the legislature, it ran into some last minute problems with the governor's office.

A few hours before Gov. Robert Straub was scheduled to sign the bill, one of his aides announced that the signing ceremony had been cancelled and that he and other executives were recommending that Straub veto the bill. But after a meeting with student lobbyists and some timely phone calls by political sponsors of the bill, the governor signed the measure one day before the deadline.

"Throughout the process we're going to be listened to more than if we were statutorily aligned with one side," said Kirby Garrett, AOSL lobbyist from the University of Oregon.

"When management says one thing and labor another, the student can sit back, do some fact-finding and then offer a cogent compromise."

The Oregon bill is due to go into effect in October, but will probably be delayed due to a dispute over whether academic collective bargaining in Oregon will proceed on a campus-by-campus or system-wide basis.

Pinter's One Acts Performed in Hershey

By Rebecca Rebok
Staff Writer

The Repertory Theatre Ensemble, an eight-member professional theatre company, has begun its second season at the Hershey Community Center. "Arsenic and Old Lace" a well-known comedy, will have 12 performances until October 18. Two one-act plays, Harold Pinter's "The Dumb Waiter" and "Ludlow Fair", are also being performed by the RTE until October 23. A third show, a drama, "The Price" by Arthur Miller will open October 17th with an eight-member cast.

The October 3rd performance of the one-acts, "The Dumb Waiter" and "Ludlow Fair", were outstanding. The two-member cast of "The Dumb Waiter", Jeff Glickman and Michael Goldstein, worked diligently to perfect the English accents needed for this Harold Pinter play. The RTE program even provided a crisp and flat explanation of the English lorie to help the audience understand this one-act play. "The Dumb Waiter's" Ben is portrayed by Michael Goldstein, a theatre major from Stanford, who is also one of the founders of the RTE.

Agnes Cummings, Susan Boulmetis and Jeff Glickman are three good reasons why the one-act "Ludlow Fair" is successful for the RTE. Agnes Cummings plays the part of Aggie, a love-starved dumpy Philadelphia office girl. Cummings' performance was by far the most skilled and artistically done. The sensitivity with which she interacted with Susan Boulmetis made her a delight to watch.

"The Dumb Waiter" and "Ludlow Fair" are two professionally performed one-act plays which will run until Oct. 23. The Repertory Theatre Ensemble can be reached for reservations and information at 534-1637.
