

Gregoreski Elected To Senate Seat

By Keltha Kessler
Staff Writer

Chet Gregoreski, a 10th term business major from Scranton, was elected to a seat in the University Faculty Senate. Gregoreski represents the students who attend the branch campuses of Penn State. Both faculty and students serve on the Senate.

University Faculty Senate is the highest form of government in the Penn State system. The senate has three main functions: Legislative function serves as a legislative body representing the university faculty. This function deals with instructional programs, graduation requirements, scholarships and honors, academic admissions standards, and programs of study.

The second function of the senate is the Advisory and Consultative function which acts as the advisory and consultative body to the university president on any matter that may affect the outcome of the educational objectives of the university.

The third function of the senate is the Forensic function which serves as a forum for the exchange of ideas among the members of the university faculty.

The senate is also divided into specialized committees. Each committee deals with certain programs. Gregoreski serves on the undergraduate instructional committee. They deal with only the undergraduate and his problems.

Meetings are held every second Tuesday of the month in the Graduate building at University Park. Senate meetings are open to the public.

"Old Fort" Makes National Registry

The Swatara Ferry House, more popularly known as the "Old Fort", was recently approved for inclusion in the National Registry of Historic Places.

Dr. Irwin Richman, coordinator of the graduate program in American Studies at Capitol fulfilled an important role in the structure's inclusion while serving as Architectural Historian and adviser to the Middletown Historic Commission. He examined the site for authenticity, structural style and period.

Dr. Richman is a member of the Society of Architectural Historians and is a well-known authority on the early history and culture of the area.

He says the structure "was not fort, but a ferry keeper's house. The part closest to the river dates from the late 18th century, while the second addition dates from the early 19th century." He continued, "They are both traditional three-room Pennsylvania German floor plans" and the addition was "probably built as a tenant house."

The decision to include the site, ultimately reached by the U.S. Department of the Interior, culminates nearly two years of surveying and communication between Middletown Borough, the Historic Commission, the Pennsylvania Redevelopment Authority, the Pennsylvania Historic and Museum Commission and HUD.

First Impressions

by Michael Barnett

The Penn State-Capitol Campus has struck home. An overwhelming happiness runs loose through its corridors and halls.

Students are no longer mere students. They're extensions of life. Veterans and middle-aged people have come to gain insight and practical knowledge. Even families troop the halls in splendid array with kids trickling along behind.

It's an atmosphere most exquisite and unique. Yet it mirrors the expectations and fulfillment of the Capitol Campus experience—the place that has so much meaning.

Open Meeting On Epilepsy

The South Central Service Unit of the Pennsylvania Epilepsy Division will hold an open meeting at the William Penn Museum, Room 24, on Sunday, November 2, 1975, from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. The meeting is open to anyone who is interested in learning more about epilepsy and its problems, or who is affected by the condition in any way. Dr. Robert Brennan, Chief, Division of Neurology, Hershey Medical Center, will speak on the medical aspects of epilepsy, and a film on epilepsy will follow.
