The tub is to be constructed of standard cast-iron and also be of standard size and shape. No holes are allowed to be drilled into the tub in order to decrease the weight of any other such method employed to decrease the weight such as acid dipping.

The bathtub is also not allowed to be powered by any energy source other than that of the team as described below. The steering system and the number of wheels used is irrelevant.

The team is to consist of eleven persons and no more. Of the eleven, ten of which will propel the tub, there will be one who is designated as the driver. The driver must navigate the tub and at no time is he allowed to leave the tub. The ten men or women, who will be propelling the craft, may be strategically located throughout the course, because at no time may there be any more than four persons pushing the tub.

The tub must follow the course layed out and no other interpretation of the course will win. The course will take place on the Capitol Campus and start at the student center and end at the Main Building parking lot. The course is estimated to be 2 miles in length. A complete map of the route is below.

Sportsmanship attitudes should be held by all. Any interference with another tub will cause a penalty of substantial nature. Interference can be termed as cutting off the competition, interfering with another tub's progress or any such forms of cheating.

Scholarship Time

Provost McDermott has announced the awarding of four scholarships for the spring term.

The four engineering technology students, Darrel Brookheimer, Robert N. Paul, Paul Skvarla and Timothy Kocher, were selected by the Engineering and Technology Division Scholarship Committee and the Committee on Academic and Athletic Standards, Awards and Scholarships.

There will be two R. T. Brown Scholarships awarded, one engineering and technology alumni scholarship and one scholarship awarded by the Greater Harrisburg Chapter of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers.

Receiving the R. T. Brown Scholarship will be Darrel Brookheimer, an electrical design engineering technology major, and Robert N. Paul, a mechanical design engineering technology student.

The R. T. Brown Scholarship is awarded in memory of R. T. Brown, a deceased engineering professor at Capitol Campus, and is funded entirely out of contributions from students, faculty and staff.

The engineering and technology alumni scholarship is being awarded to Paul Skvarla, a transportation technology major. This scholarship is made possible through donations made by engineering technology alumni donations.

Timothy Kocher is the recipient of the Greater Harrisburg Chapter of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers Scholarship. He is a mechanical design engineering technology major.

Paul Warns Bicyclists

There are an increasing number of people on campus riding their bicycles without the required lights and/or reflectors, according to James Paul, security officer.

"This is an extremely dangerous safety violation," Paul says, "and can result in serious injury or loss of life."

He warns that traffic violation notices will be issued to cyclists without this safety device on their bikes.

Gallu Scholarship Established

Samuel Gallu, a Penn State graduate and writer of the currently popular play, "Give 'Em Hell, Harry!" has established a scholarship fund at The Pennsylvania State University, honoring his parents.
