All U-Day

By Beth Kopas

Friday night at State College is a time for seeing old friends and meeting new ones. Happy Valley presents to some the chance to finally see how big their "mother college" is, and, to others, well, its time to get away, get high, get laid, or what ever. The weekend is here, and it sure is nice to see the old branch campus buddies again.
The alarm goes off at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday morning and despite the slight (or great, depending on your previous nights activities) hangover, you're up and stirring in no time. All-U day has officially begun. After washing down a quick cup of coffee and some left-over popcorn from the night before its off to the game. A ham sandwich in one pocket and a pint of rum in the other complete your warm attire on this brisk 35-degree day. If you're not sidetracked by a tailgate party, it's time to fight the crowds and have a seat anywhere from section NF to EG. The game proves to be a good one--starting off with a sky full of balloons and the Nittany Lion properly passing through the crowd and ending with a 41-14 Penn State win.

Well, it's Saturday night and time to celebrate. For the few fortunate Capitol students who got a ticket, Billy Joel is their entertainment for the evening. But the rest have a choice between bar-hopping, partying or a disco at the HUB. Most everyone ends up their evening strolling down Beaver Avenue and munching out at McDonald's. As the song goes "Oh, what a night," and now it's, oh how good it feels to finally go to bed!

Is that a pistol in Joe's pocket, or is he just keeping his hands warm?
I was standing there, not doin' nothin', and this big guy knocked me down.

We've gotta quit meeting like this!

It's either Cappizolli or Bahr and one of them is kicking a field goal, or an extra point.
The score was 41-20 because it took the whole team to tackle one man.
Oh Oh! I think I just tackled a band member.
