

A Mime In Everyone

Recently, there has been a great deal of wild speculation regarding the name of the Capitol Campus literary magazine, TARNHELM. One rumor has it that the annual collection of poetry, short fiction, plays, etc. was named after Ezra Tarnhelm, a Middletown native who achieved fame for his contribution to the sonnet form.

It is true that in his slim volume entitled, "Musings On The Swatara Creek," Mr. Tarnhelm elevated the sonnet from a mere fourteen line poetical statement and resolution of a single theme to a sixteen line non-statement and non-resolution of no less than ten nor more than thirteen different themes.

Mr. Tarnhelm was an innovator, no doubt about it—a great believer in variety being the spice and all that sort of thing. However, the geographic proximity of this poetical luminary must be regarded as purely coincidental and having no bearing on the name of Capitol's literary magazine.

It is also not true that TARNHELM is a condition similar to "ring around the collar" or "waxy yellow build-up", both of which result from the inattentiveness of housewives with slovenly personal habits. Neglecting to polish one's HELM, in other words, will not result in an embarrassing case of TARN.

So, the mystery remains. What does TARNHELM mean? Quite simply, a TARNHELM is a hat. It is a very special sort of hat, not the tweedy kind you'd wear to tramp about the moors, nor the white cloth variety worn by house painters to protect their heads from too much sun and other things that fall from the sky. As a matter of fact, you would be hard put to find a TARNHELM in any local haberdashery because...well, frankly a TARNHELM is a magic, golden helmet-type of hat, resembling an inverted acorn with wings springing from each side. The original TARNHELM was fashioned by a mythical dwarf, a Nibelung if you will, named Mime, from a stolen treasure called the Rhinegold.

The unique magical qualities of TARNHELM endow the wearer with the ability to transform himself at will and travel anywhere in the world on a wish. None of this will seem surprising to anyone who enjoys opera and is familiar with the series of three works by Richard Wagner which combine to form the "Ring Of The Nibelung."

What is surprising however, is that we at Capitol Campus have the same magical opportunity through our own TARNHELM. There is a Mime in every one of us waiting to find expression in a poem, an essay, a play, a photograph, a drawing, a short story, or whatever.

Our hope for Capitol's literary magazine is that you will take advantage of this chance to share the products of your creativity, your personal transformations, and visions. We are accepting contributions now. Deposit your work in the TARNHELM can in the Humanities office, Room W-161. Be sure to include your name and address for return. If you feel shy or have never done this kind of thing before, please be assured that all works will be anonymously and impartially considered. Put on your wishing hat and lend a hand in forging a TARNHELM that's better than ever for 1977.
