feet and 3,500 feet, and routines can be no longer than 13 minutes.

The majority of home-builts are created strictly for fun and are built for sport flying as is the Pitts S1-S.

Menear describes the home-builder as "for the most part average Americans, who are both patient craftsmen and pilots, and are therefore able to realize a dream to build and fly their own plane.

He is annoyed by those who criticize the private aircraft segment, pointing out that he is as concerned with safety as is the EAA.

"Homebuilders are not the lunatic fringe," he says, "after all, no one thinks people who build boats are nuts, why should it be different with an airplane?"

To finish the plane, Menear must insert the gauges, glue and sew the fabric to the wings and tail, add the propellor, and wait for final inspection by the FAA.

He is now only months away from donning his cap, gloves and scarf and fulfilling a dream that many share, but one reserved for a select few: flying.

Lehigh U. Holds IAA Conference

By Tim Adams

The International Affairs Association recently attended a conference on the affairs of the world sponsored by Lehigh University.

The conference concerned itself with laws of the sea, world food resources, arms control, solar energy and a special-interest topic, space colonization.

Professors from Moravian, Muhlenberg and other colleges held seminars on the various topics.

No resolutions to the problems were given, but recommendations on how these problems should be approached were discussed.

Education of people to the dangers of overpopulation and the ensuing depletion of the world food supply, utilization of solar energy, limitations of armaments and colonization of space were some of these recommendations.

Those in attendance from Capitol Campus were George Crowell, Andria Yelverton, Joe Mahar, John Greenway, Carmella Donald and the group's advisor, Prof. Clem Gilpin.

The Penn State- Capitol Campus fall commencement will be held at the Middletown Area High School, Sat., Dec. 11 at 11:00 a.m. A total of 129 students will be awarded degrees.
