sat down at another table, some more members of the organization came in, were greeted by the president and vice-president, and were seated at the adjoining table.

As the evening progressed, the immediate membership didn't do a good job of hosting. They didn't greet any of the whites as they came in, and didn't go around to the tables to thank people for helping make the affair a success.

I left before the play started because of the manners exemplified by the leadership. I felt as though anyone who wasn't a member of the executive committee of the organization was being discriminated against, Black and White alike.

As I observed the leadership of the Black Student Union, I couldn't help but committee is urged to submit, in writing, those suggestions to Dr. Shuttlesworth in W-356. He will forward them to the committee for review.

In addition, the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs has initiated a survey of the evening and weekend students concerning the provision of university services to these students. All evening students reflect on "Watergate". Here we have two leaders, the president and vice-president, impersonating one another. Anytime an affair is given, one can feel the presence of the "dual crusaders", "big and little dictator."

It is my intention to shed a little light on certain members of the B.S.U. While their intentions may be the very best (in terms of all the planning that went into the Black Arts Festival), it is my hope that they exemplify better manners and respect to those who come out in support of their activities. And should the Black Arts Festival be run in the same manner as the affair on February 5th, maybe the SGA should take a closer look at the B.S.U.

will have an opportunity to fill a questionnaire. The results will be published as soon as they are reviewed and evaluated by the committee. Following the review, the committee will make recommendations to the Faculty Council regarding ways of meeting these needs. The survey is expected to go out late this term or early Spring Term.
