

Joemy Wilson and Jon Harvey did their thing in "Mime Musica" on April 30th.

Fake it

The audience was part of the show on April 30th in the auditorium as Jon Harvey and Joemy Wilson presented "Mime Musica." This program was an offering of the Penn State Cultural Committee.

The largest segment of the audience was a sizable group of fourth graders from Grandview Elementary School. The artists quickly adapted their program and the results were charming.

The youngsters responded enthusiastically to both Jon's mime and the musical offerings of Joemy as she accompanied herself on an Appalachian Mountain Dulcimer, a traditional folk instrument.

She led the group into singing a folk song, "Green Corn." Commenting that "TMI has given Middletowners much to protest." Joemy then introduced a protest song, "Garbage," in which the audience again participated.

A highlight of the performance was Jon's lesson in mime. Stepping out of character, he told his listeners some of the techniques of "communicating without sound."

In the spirit of education, he then leaped from the stage and, in hilarious face-to-face confrontations, made certain his "students" had been listening. The lesson was a preview of the workshop which followed the performance.

The husband-wife team is from the Philadelphia area. They have performed across country and have been seen on educational TV. Presently, they are on a tour of all PSU campuses.

Club'naround

It's been more than a month since the American Society of Engineers had its last formal meeting. The club's most recent activities include ASME Student Night, which was April 17. The night opened up with a dinner at San Carlos in York and was highlighted by a Harley-Davidson Plant tour.

The ASME Annual Student Conference which took place on April 20-21 at Lehigh University wound up to be an informative event as well as an experience in true professionalism. Capitol Campus was represented by Lou Rapp. Lou's presentation concerned the case for hydrogen as a fuel. The feasibility of alternative energy sources seemed to be a popular topic among competitors. John Battaglioli of Union College, whose presentation concerning the design of a left ventricular assist device, took first place. Capitol Campus was awarded for highest attendance. Also, due to the effort of president Terry Hershner, Capitol Campus was awarded second place in the Bendix contest. This contest is based on the number of activities sponsored throughout the year. Of the 27 sections contained in Region III, there were approximately 15 sections represented at the conference.

The election of officers of the 79-80 year was held last term. The results are Frank Huk, President; Al Butcavage, Vice-President; Joe Winnicki, Secretary; and Marty Wasser, Treasurer. In view of the fact that this election was publicized greatly and even delayed in order to accumulate votes, these officers were elected by 20 percent of the club's members.

One final note, ASME will be having an all you can eat and drink picnic sometime this term for its members. Perhaps this lightened atmosphere will draw some enthusiasm into ASME.

The Chi Gamma Iota Fraternity has gotten into the swing of April. In spite of a weeks early vacation, our Easter ham campaign was a success.

Five lucky winners were able to present an 8lb. ham to their families and friends for enjoyment over the Easter holiday.

Our kegger planned for April 7 was cancelled, but the members are discussing alternative plans for the month of

May. Students can expect at least one more bash with the XGI's before leaving Capitol Campus for the summer.

Meetings were held on April 10 and 17, at which time six new members entered our ranks. These new members are: Mike Sheldon, Ginger Vestich, Phil Geigert, Harry Lambert, Lou Popa and Vince Zarrella.

Our athletic teams are also going strong. Currently, the softball team is 1-1. The Gnatmen were defeated 13-7 on April 19. April 23 saw an intense game with the Bushwackers, who won 9-4.

The volleyball team entered the playoffs on April 19, but were defeated by Heartpunch.

Bowling has recently started, and from first reports the team should be strong competition. On April 24, members and guests boarded a bus and headed for Veterans Stadium to see the Phillies play the Dodgers. All going were supplied with food, beer and entertainment.

The weekend of April 27-29 is the Annual Veterans Softball Tournament at University Park. Reservations have been made for the team.

Congratulations to all the new Executive Officers and Senators. Best of luck to all your efforts in the forthcoming year. If our Fraternity can be of any assistance in your efforts, please feel free to contact members of the Executive Board.
