

Name - Michael V. Sopata
Term, Major - 12th, Social Science - Public Policy

"The C.C. Reader is the only media by which communication could travel between the students and the administration. Therefore, relaying messages should be the most important goal of this newspaper. It already has honesty and fairness on its side."

Name - Tom King
Term, Major - 12th, Business Administration

"Yes, I do feel the C.C. Reader is fulfilling its responsibility to the students. I think its a way of giving feedback to the administration of Capitol Campus. The paper also provides a variety of articles for the students' amusement and information."

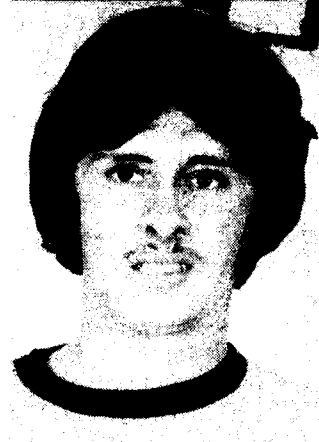

Name - Phillip Geigert
Major - Business Administration - Marketing

"For the few people that have to put the paper together, you are to be commended for doing it. You do an excellent job with what you have to work with, but I hope you become more diversified in your topics. Cover both sides of the story and include more of the other areas of education here at 'C.C. the pits!'"

Name - Pete
Term, Major - 12th, Marketing

"Yes, I think that considering the limited size of the newspaper's staff due to the high level of student apathy at Capitol, the newspaper does a very adequate job. At least one article has caused the administration to respond, which is the main purpose of a student newspaper. Also, the Letters to the Editor afford us a much needed opportunity to bitch when there is good reason to."

Name Iggy Lesyk
Term, Major - 12th, Accounting

"Yes, I read the paper, but comparing it to other college newspapers I feel they could do a better job. Some sections are adequate but we need a more indepth knowledge of what is really happening at Old Main. They control this place 100 per cent from 100 miles away. The administration here is merely a cast of puppets. We the students don't know what's going to happen. Perhaps that's what the Penn State SYSTEM is all about."

Opinions at a glance

by bob foster

Do you read the C.C. Reader? If not, why not; and if you do, do you feel that the paper is fulfilling its responsibility as a student newspaper?

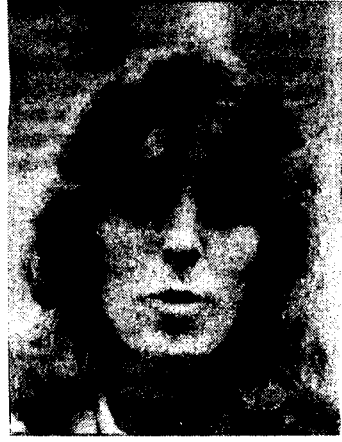

Name - Janice Ball
Term, Major - 12th, Accounting

"No, I don't have time."

Name - Ruth Chess
Term, Major - 12th, Business Administration

"I think the paper prints everything turned in to it by students and the administration. However, I feel that stories should be censored for correctness and interest."

Name - Lynn Kenny
Term, Major - 10th, Business

Yes, I read the C.C. Reader. The paper does fulfill its responsibility as a student paper. The short articles about students' activities and events are enjoyable. It informs commuting students about activities on campus."

Name - Todd Barnhart
Term, Major-Visitor, steelworker at Bethlehem Steel Corporation

"The spiritless C.C. Reader, with all of its typos, ludicrous misspellings and bland articles only reflect the tragedy of Penn State's branch campuses, particularly Capitol Campus."

Team

C.C. Reader Opinion

Dead and Gone

It seems that the college community is spinning its wheels on the keggar issue and is getting nowhere on multi-activities for this campus.

In the past, students who lived on campus could drink beer at the Student Center then walk home. This may have curtailed car accidents which may have ensued when students drove back from drinking off campus, which is a very positive aspect of the keggars. Another positive aspect was that keggars were money making activities for organizations; but then, other money making activities have never been fully explored.

Keggars should be held as an alternative activity and could possibly revolve around a specific theme that would involve a costume party and games instead of just drinking. Organizations could co-sponsor keggars and divide the profits.

The keggar of the past is dead. Let's keep it that way.

Bitch

WHY AREN'T THE GROUNDS EVER TAKEN CARE OF AROUND HERE UNTIL SOMEBODY IMPORTANT VISITS THE CAMPUS (TMI COMMISSION)?

I'M SICK OF HEARING OTHER PEOPLE BITCH ABOUT EVERYTHING!

I'M TIRED OF HEARING ABOUT BEER

Box

c.c. reader penn state university capitol campus office: W-129 phone: 944-4970

editor lyda baker business managers bob manley and david horn feature editor susan dirolami sports editor tony gladfeller photo editor bob foster typesetter me cartoonist joe horvath staff joan klein louisa baskin jeff drinnan gayle greenwald advisor candy williams

the views expressed in this paper are not necessarily those of the c.c. reader staff

