

Collegian starts weekly

Commonwealth Campuses are among the targets for a new newspaper that began publication Sept. 12.

The new paper, The Weekly Collegian, will be published by Collegian Inc., which produces The Daily Collegian at Penn State's University Park Campus.

Collegian Editor Pete Barnes said The Weekly Collegian will have the same format as The Daily Collegian.

"We anticipate that The Weekly Collegian will carry more than half of the campus news that we now publish in the daily," Barnes said. "We'll carry heavy coverage of Penn State football and other varsity sports, because that's where there's a lot of reader interest."

Barnes said the weekly will also carry news that will be of general interest to the Commonwealth Campuses.

"Many Commonwealth Campus students will eventually transfer to University Park," Barnes said. "We often carry news about the housing situation and rents in the State College area."

Barnes said the new paper will also carry advance news about concerts and other cultural events at University Park.

"If your campus has its own newspaper, that's the best place to get news about your campus," Barnes said. "But THE Weekly Collegian will be the best place to get regular news for the University Park campus."

Collegian Business Manager Marjie Schlessinger said Collegian Inc. often gets requests for more papers for the Commonwealth Campuses.

"It's not financially possible to supply additional copies of the daily," she said. "That's one of the reasons we decided to start the weekly edition."

Subscriptions for the weekly are available from Collegian Inc., 126 Carnegie Building; University Park, Pa. 16802. The annual subscription price is $12 for 36 issues. The annual subscription price for the daily is $33.

ABOUT COEGIAN INC.

The Daily Collegian publishes 20,000 copies a day for the University Park Campus. The average issue contains nearly 20 pages. More than 200 students work on the Collegian staff.

Collegian Inc. is a private non-profit corporation that was chartered by Pennsylvania in 1940. However, The Daily Collegian traces its roots back to April 18, 1887. The Daily Collegian is nationally ranked among the top five college dailies.

The corporation, which is self-supporting, is completing a five-phase capital project to automate the news room. When the $180,000 project is completed Collegian will be using two computers and 16 video display terminals to produce The Daily Collegian and The Weekly Collegian.

Collegian Inc. will start two other projects during the Fall Term.

The Business Staff plans to install a computer to automate the corporation's management statistics and financial records.

The News Staff will open a Harrisburg Bureau staffed by a student intern. The bureau will cover news that originates in the state capital and affects Penn State.

The Daily Collegian also plans to hold an open house Oct. 13 as part of Homecoming weekend at University Park.

nuclear rally.

The reader asked Gross if he knew who made the decision to reject the rally.

"No decision was made. The facilities just weren't available," Gross said. "We just can't go on handling events of this nature. The campus is just too small. We had to say 'no', and we will say 'no' to other groups," he said.

The Reader then asked Gross if the campus would also say 'no' to pro-nuclear groups, such as the NRC.

"We will say 'no' to the NRC too," Gross said.

The Reader also asked

Gross if he felt the decision to not host the Fonda - Hayden rally against nuclear power was made in the best interest of the campus community.

"That was never the question," Gross said. "It was a question of physical space; the rally was more than we could handle physically," he said.

Gross continued to say that the decision to not host the rally was not a political point of view. Gross said, "A University should not have a political point of view; an individual should."

When asked if he agreed with the decision to not host the anti-nuclear rally, Gross replied, "Yes, I suppose I do."

Counseling center news

Throughout the Fall Term, the Counseling Center will be open on Monday and Thursday nights from 5:30 to 8 p.m. The evening hours were established last year in response to heavy student usage.

The same personal, vocational and educational counseling services provided during the day are now available at night.

The graduate-school and vocational reference libraries are open for browsing; application forms for the GREs, GMATs, LSATs and NTEs are available, and a counselor will be on hand to consult with you. Arrangements to take the Miller Analogies Test (required by many programs for admission) may also be made at night.

Students wishing to make an appointment to speak with a counselor need only call 783-6025 or stop by the Center Monday or Thursday nights. The Counseling Center... more than a place to talk.

Learn to live

Classes in C.P.R. (cardio pulmonary resuscitation) will be held each Wednesday morning or afternoon and one evening per week. Anyone interested in learning how to perform C.P.R. and the Heimlich maneuver please see Mrs. Kresge from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. or Mrs. Petrosino from 5:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. in room w-102. Phone 783-6015.

Health center to show film

The Health Center will sponsor a twenty minute film entitled "Joey" on Oct. 15th at 9:15 a.m. in the Conference Room, Multi-purpose building. This film was put together by the Comprehensive Hemophilia Center of the Hershey Medical Center. The film explores the medical, psychosocial and vocational aspects of hemophilia. There will be a representative from the medical center to answer questions following the film.
