Latest experiment in the newly constructed Frank N. Stein Memorial Science Center: Rover in Wonderland [one pill makes him smaller]. The center, tucked away in the woods between the dorms and the Heights, has been developing ways to shrink students so as to make better use of available space. In this test, Rover, once a well-known sissy, is now a bold watchdog. An official at Frank N. Stein said that their results prove that, by feeding students these pills they would shed their apathy as well as make more use of Capitol's miniscule facilities. The center is now producing these pills en masse.

C.C. represented at INPUT Festival

The Capitol Campus Multi-Media group will be represented at the International Public Television Screening Conference (INPUT) to be hosted in Washington, D.C., March 23-29, by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Dr. Eton Churchill, Assistant Professor of Humanities and Multi-Media Journalism, has been invited to show "Changes" at the INPUT Festival. "Changes" is a 28-minute production about the human reaction to the Three Mile Island accident last March. Churchill produced "Changes" with the Multi-Media group at Capitol Campus.

The INPUT Festival allows producers, broadcasters, and others concerned with public television around the world to view and discuss selected programs. "Changes" was selected because of its focus on the human rights of citizens and because of "risk taking in the context of current broadcast mores," according to those who selected the materials to be shown.

"Changes" was shot last spring within 15 miles of the TMI plant. The program was edited by Churchill at the studios of the Maine Public Broadcasting Network (MPBN) during the summer. MPBN aired "Changes" in October, 1979.
