The last program in "The Folk Music and Dance Legacy Series" will present John Jackson at 12:15 p.m. on Monday, April 21, in the Gallery Lounge.

Jackson is a blues singer who emphasizes the African influence on American folk music and dance in his work. African folk traditions were brought to North America by slaves and have been a major influence—especially on music.

Jackson, born in Rappahannock County, Virginia, grew up in a rural black community. His father played guitar and banjo, and sang blues. His mother played accordion and harmonica, and sang gospel.

By age eight, Jackson was a competent musician. He has toured the United States, Europe, and South America performing Field and Delta Blues. The campus community is cordially invited to attend the performance. Admission is free.
