Graduate Test Deadlines Set

Students interested in applying for graduate or professional study should be aware that many schools require scores from one of the major national standardized entrance examinations such as the Graduate Record Examination (GRE's), Graduate Management Admissions Test (GMAT's), Law School Admissions Test (LSAT's), National Teachers Examination (NTE's), and the Miller Analogy Test (MAT's). Bulletins of Information, complete with registration forms, for these tests are available in the Counseling Center (W-117). This year there will be two administrations of the GRE's (December 13, 1980 and February 7, 1981) and one administration of GMAT's (October 25, 1980) at Capitol. The Miller Analogy Test is administered daily on an appointment basis in the Counseling Center.

President Seeks Student View on Change

Dr. John W. Oswald, President of The Pennsylvania State University is considering a change from a term to a semester system in the University calendar. He is asking students, faculty and staff members to submit to him their recommendations on the change by December 1, 1980.

Dr. Oswald is considering the change because of apparent disenchantment with the current four-term calendar.

"... I am inclined to conclude that Penn State should return to a semester calendar, specifically the early semester plan which aims to complete all instructional activities and exams in the fall term prior to the December holidays," Oswald said.

However, although the calendar change is seriously being considered, the final decision is definitely not certain. Several of the major issues that may affect and influence Oswald's decision are: teaching loads, availability of laboratory and classroom space, faculty research, faculty contracts, conversion of courses, curricula, and schedules.

Because of these issues, Dr. Oswald is urging students, faculty and staff to give the matter serious consideration. If enough support for the change is found, the conversion to the early semester calendar would be made in the summer of 1984.

NEW LOOK FOR CC READER

Actually, this was not supposed to happen. Our new look this week has been forced upon us by the breakdown of our Compuwriter I. Repairs are underway, so we expect to be back to usual form by the next issue.

Thank you, Student Affairs, for the use of the typewriter!
