

Counseling Center News

Since this is the last issue of the C.C. Reader for Fall Term 1980, we want to say congratulations to all the graduates and wish you all the best. Keep in touch.

To the students who will be returning have a nice month's vacation and don't forget to stop in and see us when you return. Also remember to check the bulletin boards for any workshops in the Directions '80-'81 series.

Test Date Reminders

Candidates interested in the GREs, GMATs, LSAT, and NTEs should be aware of the following deadlines in view of the fact that the Counseling Center will be closed from December 20, 1980 through January 4, 1981.

Test	Test Date 2	Regular Regis. Deadline	Late Regis. Deadline 1.

COMMENTS ON BOOKSTORE NEEDED

The faculty committee on bookstore activities would like suggestions from students, faculty, and staff on improving the Capitol Campus bookstore. Although textbook prices will probably remain high because of rising costs for printing, paper, and postage, some desirable changes may be possible if enough members of the campus community express interest and submit their ideas for change. Write your suggestions in the space provided, clip, and drop in the C.C. Reader box in Room W-129.

SPORTY NEW SEDANS AND WAGON FROM VOLVO

Racy five-spoke alloy wheels, a front spoiler, and blacked out trim give a clue to the sporty performance you can expect from the new Volvo GLTs. The basic GLT two-door sedan is powered by Volvo's dependable 107 hp, four-cylinder overhead cam fuel injected engine, driving through either an automatic or four-speed manual with overdrive transmission. If you want more performance, the GLT Turbo offers 127 hp from a turbo supercharged version of Volvo's four banger. Bold styling, flawless handling, and 0 to 60 mph times of under ten seconds make the Turbo a real driver's car. Or, if you need the extra roominess of a wagon, but you don't want to give up sportiness, then the GLT five-door is for you. Its blend of sporty car handling and station wagon versatility make it unique in the marketplace.

Graduate School

The future. Does it mean a job opportunity or a continuation of school? At the end of another term nears, many graduating students may be facing this difficult question.

To the student who is ready for employment, congratulations and good luck! But to those students who may be considering graduate work, this may be one of the most important decisions you will ever have to make.

When considering graduate school, a fact to keep in mind is that not all professions require any degree higher than a B.A. or a B.S. Check out the graduate school's affiliation with local, regional, and national employers to find out if the school is working with employers in your field who require a graduate education for their employees.

Although a master's degree may increase entry-level salaries and open doors to new opportunities, be prepared to also consider the cost of a graduate education.

The cost for an upper-level degree varies according to the quality of the school's program, the profession chosen and the amount of time needed to get the degree. It may cost anywhere from the estimated $5,000 for one year of graduate schooling to as much as $62,000 for four years.

So, exactly what is the point of a graduate education?

A graduate education is designed to give a student an opportunity to zero-in on his or her focus while at the same time exposing the student to more knowledge in a particular field. In other words, a student moves from the general to the specific. The formula of blending core requirements with electives is the main key for students in mastering the chosen discipline.

A graduate education takes time, money, and discipline. But with the right goals in mind, a student who is considering graduate school may find it to be a rewarding experience in more ways than one.

Professor admits plagiarizing book

Campus Digest News Service

An instructor at San Francisco State University may face disciplinary action for his admitted plagiarism.

Charles Fracchia, 43, who lectures on the cultural history of San Francisco, said that in trying to meet a deadline for a magazine article, he panicked and plagiarized sections of a book on the city's theater history.

The plagiarism was revealed in a campus newspaper on the basis of an anonymous tip. A faculty committee is studying the case and will make recommendations to Paul F. Romberg, the university president, on what action is to be taken.

Diary Of A College Revolutionary

by Major S.C. Anon

(Well, well, well. The psycho promoted himself once again. We've been trying to figure out what the "S.C." stands for. So far the best suggestion was "sick cookie," although "space cadet" might apply also. "Scrambled cerebrum," "sorry character," "something cosmic"? Who cares? Here it is.)

I read an editorial in the C.C. Reader entitled "Drink Responsibly." It was hilarious. That's one funny guy. (He couldn't have been serious). He could have been a bit more sarcastic though, because you could almost believe that he actually meant what he was saying. Just as well that it wasn't for real.

I read Leonard Wumke's article too. To those people who stole the pitchers from Thirsty's - may you suffer from the painful rectal itch, you lowlife grubs.

And that letter to the editor entitled "Student Longs to Belong," excellent. I agree completely. Cover that wall up with something until it gets painted over.

I am convinced that everyone on my street has been planted there by the FBI to keep me under constant surveillance.

Some character was mocking the Eagles down in Vendorville this afternoon. I now understand that he met with a fatal accident earlier this evening. It seems that while he was cleaning his .44 Magnum, it went off, shooting him in the head - six times.

Wednesday, November 12th

Well here I sit in a really excellent chair. The place I'm in is call Sera-Tech. When I answered their ad in the C.C. Reader, I didn't know that they intended to stick a pipe in my arm.

Some girl here just remarked that yesterday she saw a black woman with a hickie on her neck. I don't know what's so unusual about that. If the hickie had been anywhere else she probably wouldn't have seen it, or would she?

Lesson for the day: Be sure brain is engaged before putting mouth in gear.

Saturday, November 15th

A bad day for Temple football fans. I went to the supermarket today and some character came up to me and said that my turtleneck sweater was on backwards. For several moments I stood there wondering how he could know that, until I realized that he was deliberately trying to confuse me, hence making my life more complicated. I don't like a complicated life, and I don't like seeing other people with complicated lives, so I simplified his. I force-fed him various kitchen utensils, bypassing the mouth and inserting them directly into his stomach.

Monday, November 17th

It's snowing! That means it's time to make a rough draft of my Christmas list.
