Tarnhelm News

At this week's regular meeting of the Tarnhelm staff, reading and evaluation of submissions will begin. Several writers and photographers and an artist have expressed interest in submitting material exemplifying Tarnhelm's proposed theme-Man and Machine.

Most of the ideas and proposals in the Man and Machine subject area have centered around the degenerative effect technology has had on the quality of life. The staff is especially interested in receiving material (photos, poems, short stories, etc.) which have a theme that says machines or technology in general have been of benefit to mankind.

Again, the staff wants to make it clear that Tarnhelm is open to persons in any program or major, graduate or undergraduate, at Capitol Campus. So, if you have the head of an engineer, but still have the soul of an artist, feel free to contribute to Tarnhelm.

Jan Hrabovsky, a recent Multi-Media Journalism graduate, has offered to do the artwork for the cover of Tarnhelm and will submit her final drawing at the end of this month.

For more information about Tarnhelm, call Neil at 367-2768 or Jim and Alice at 944-0101.
