

Fall grads told to develop self-awareness

By Barbara Myers

"The expectations that we hold for today's graduates are predicated on a belief that you whom we honor today will, as a direct result of your education, live in ways that will benefit society. For if you fail to do this, we as a society will surely fail."

So said by Dr. James D. South, director of student affairs at Capitol Campus, to 139 students in fall term commencement exercises on December 11, 1982.

Dr. South told the graduates that the person who has gained self-awareness will be the person most able to utilize the freedom which distinguishes and benefits humanity.

The role of the university in developing this self-awareness, he said, must be to "facilitate the development of competent individuals" by providing each graduate with an understanding of the world and (with the ability) to think and analyze.

Dr. Theodore L. Gross, provost and dean of Capitol Campus, presided over the ceremony. Assisting him in the conferring of degrees was The Honorable Robert G. Scanlon, secretary of education and member of the University's Board of Trustees; Dr. Robert W. Carrubba, associate dean of the University's Graduate School; and Dr. Duane R. Smith, associate provost and dean of Capitol Campus.

Bachelors' degrees were awarded to 112 students and Master's degrees to 27. Undergraduate degrees were awarded in business administration, elementary education, humanities, social sciences, and engineering technology. Graduate degrees were awarded in administration, American studies, humanities, education, engineering sciences, public administration, psychosocial science and regional planning.

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you're near the bottom of the ladder.

In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're an officer. You'll have the kind of job your education and training prepared you for, and the decision-making authority you need to make the most of it.

As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $17,000—more than most companies would pay you right out of college. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, your salary will have increased to as much as $31,000.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy officer, and take charge. Even at 22.
