

Campus Homecoming premiers next month

By Jo Griffiths

On May 7, some Capitol Campus professors may run into a few of their former students. That's the day the first Capitol Campus Homecoming will be held, according to the campus Alumni Board.

The proposal became a reality when alumni responded favorably to a mail inquiry seeking support for the homecoming idea, said Sue Snell-Austin, Homecoming chairman, in a recent article about the event. The number of alumni volunteering to support the activity was encouraging enough for her to give it a try, she said.

A recent check with the Campus Relations Office has things still very much in the planning stage, but there is a tentative schedule. Things will kick off around noon with a double-header baseball game between Capitol Campus and Wilmington College. Other activities planned for the day will include strolling musicians, mini-seminars on topics like solar energy and antiques, and round-table discussion between professors and alumni. There will be free, unlimited use of campus athletic facilities and the bookstore will be open. Also, the kids will have fun having their pictures taken with the Nitany Lion.

Students will be able to operate concession stands for the event with proceeds going for use in the groups' activities.

Alumni will be able to bring their own refreshments and picnic lunches or may buy food at the various stands. A chicken barbeque is planned for 5:30 p.m.

Faculty, alumni, students, and others desiring more information on the Homecoming should contact the Campus Relations Office (948-6000) for more information.

Workshop to encourage sharing

By Lisa Noro

Love and marriage, as the saying goes, go together like a horse and carriage. But, when combined with outside forces such as school, work and kids, the carriage might resemble a pack-mule stuck in the mud.

Marriage or any relationship, can be hard to maintain when either partner has too much else on his/her mind. Therefore, the Counseling Center plans to provide the "oasis where students and their partners (in any relationship) can come together to talk about themselves," states Ed Beck, Counselor and coordinator of this workshop, to be held May 4, 11, 18 and 25 from 6:00 to 7:30 p.m. Location of the workshops will be announced to registrants prior to the first scheduled date.

"I'd like to see sharing of feelings. It's nice to know you're not alone and can look toward others for support."

According to Beck, the workshops will concentrate on those issues relevant to every person in the group. "I'd like to see sharing of feelings. It's nice to know you're not alone and can look towards others for support," Beck said.

A pre-registration interview with Beck is required of both partners, which can be set up through the Counseling Center. The workshop is free and confidential but a commitment for all the sessions must be made.

"We'd like the thrust to be on enrichment and communication," added Beck. "But, it'll be fun with much participation."

The Counseling Center invites any club or group of people to volunteer to babysit on those evenings.
