

Seven from Capitol attend model U.N. conference

By Jeffrey G. Shatzer

A seven member delegation of Capitol Campus students attended the University of Pennsylvania's 18th Model United Nations Conference held November 10 through 13 in Philadelphia.

The delegates, chosen through the International Affairs Association, were Joe Oddo, Chris Barrett, Graham Mitchell, Peter Mekosh, Frank S. Stramara, Tony Kanakis and Panos Xynarios.

The group's advisor, Clem Gilpin, has been involved in model United Nations conferences since his undergraduate years at Virginia State University.

After accepting the invitation to the conference, the Capitol Campus delegation was assigned to represent Algeria. The members then researched key issues that were to be debated, and presented their views from the position of their assigned country.

The atmosphere is competitive and recognition is given to individuals, not whole delegations.

Capitol's Frank S. Stramara, one of nine members on the court of justices, received recognition for his knowledge and understanding of the legal ramifications surrounding the KAL flight 007 incident in Soviet air space.

Capitol's seven members competed with 4,500 other delegates from such schools as Princeton,

Yale, Dickinson, Michigan and Memphis.

The people who went as delegates from Capitol will serve as the core of a model United Nations conference to be held here at Capitol Campus for secondary schools next February 23 through 25.
