

(CPS)-Thanks to the economic recovery, the market for student interns seems to have reversed itself in the last few weeks.

Campus art exhibit

A number of campuses around the country report businesses are offering more internships this fall, and that the campus cooperative education offices are having a hard time finding enough students to satisfy the demand.

"Placement is up this semester due to the turnaround in the economy," reports Keith Kirby, co-op ed director at Wichita State University. "For the first time, employers are calling us for students."

The third of a series of Art exhibits featuring the work of local artist/educators is currently hanging in the Humanities Suite Gallery. This month's artist is Susan Gottlieb, an art teacher at Donegal High school in Mount Joy. Her drawings and paintings are abstractions of simple organic forms and shadows. They are the products of two graduate courses she completed this summer at the Maryland Institute College of Arts in Baltimore.

"Ms. Gottlieb's admiration of the works of Robert Motherwill, Helen Franklin Thaler and Milton Avery is evident in her own recent work," Linda Ross, instructor in humanities and education said. Acrylic and pastel are her preferred media and many of her pieces are collages that exploit the textural richness that these materials can produce according to Ross.

Some of the artwork by Susan Gottlieb can be found now in the humanities division suite.

President Gasiorek is looking forward to her year in SGA. She said she has great confidence in the new staff.

"We have a good group this year. They're a cohesive group," she said. "We need a group that works together, and I think that's what we have."

GOING TO LAW SCHOOL? THEN YOU NEED TO TAKE THE LAW SCHOOL ADMISSIONS TEST — — — AND DO WELL!!

Of course, you can run to a bookstore and buy some assembly-line study guide on the LSAT. Or you can sign up for one of those preparatory courses offered only in Philadelphia which cost you $400 and up, not including travel expenses. If you're brave and brilliant, you can walk into the LSAT cold... with no preparation.

OR you can take the one course offered in Harrisburg, the one course with a convenient weekend meeting time, the one course taught by lawyers and professors who know about testing, and the one and only course for under $250.
