Women's club to give award

By Alice Martin

The Capitol Campus Faculty Women's Club voted Sept. 11 to award a $500 grant to a Capitol Campus student in memory of Regina Susskind, wife of Jacob Susskind, assistant professor of social science and education. Mrs. Susskind died on Aug. 8.

"Any full-time undergraduate or graduate student working toward an advanced degree is eligible," said Mary Heindel, club president. "The student must have a grade point average of 3.0, must show financial need as determined by the financial aid office, and must be of high character."

Students interested in the grant should apply to the financial aid office. Graduating students are not eligible. The grant -- eleventh since the club's founding in 1970 -- will be presented at the May 1986 commencement.

Award applicants will be screened by the financial aid office and selected faculty members.

The Women's Club also sponsors a revolving loan fund, said Joanne Smith, scholarship chairman for the club.

Students may borrow $100 for up to 90 days, or $1,000 per academic year, repayable after graduation, Smith said.

"Short-term loans are used for such things as books," said Smith. "Long-term loans are for tuition, repayable in accordance with university policy in effect at the time."

To fund its scholarship and loan program, the club will sponsor a bake sale Oct. 9, 10:30 - 4 p.m. outside the Lion's Den, and a Tupperware and Amway products sale in mid-November.

"Orders will be taken from the Tupperware and Amway catalogues," Smith said. "The products will be delivered to your home. The money from these sales will go to the student awards and loan programs."

According to Smith most students don't know these loans are available. "They can get a loan from us when they can't get it anywhere else," she said.

The objects of the club are to promote sociability among its members and to coordinate a program of activities beneficial to the university community. The club currently has 46 members.

BSU to have speaker at Capitol

by Ken Stiggers

A socially mixed Black Student Union has announced plans for a speaker on Vietnam, two fundraisers, a dance and an Ethiopia fund drive. BSU officials made the announcements at their meeting last week.

Last spring the club solicited funds outside the Capitol Campus community for Ethiopia.

"Now the need is great enough again to solicit funds from the Capital Campus community," said BSU president, Juanita Singletary.

The club has planned another fund drive and has designated October as "Africare Month." The funds will be presented to the Harrisburg area Red Cross, BSU officials said.
