SGA senators elected to serve students

By Josette Kloker

The Student Government Association, held its elections Sept. 28 and 29.

According to John Nagengast, president of S.G.A., nine senators were elected. He said all S.G.A. members plus the entire student body were eligible to vote.

The following senators were elected: Michelle Noecker, junior senator-at-large; Toni Mandronico, junior senator-at-large; Judy Zimmerman, junior senator of business administration; Aleta Johnson, junior senator of behavioral science and education; Cynthia Dargay, junior senator of public policy; Dean Foote, junior senator of science, engineering, and technology; Sean Donnelly, senior senator-at-large; Barbara Smith, senior senator-at-large; latter is much more prestigious than the former.

Another senator, Aleta Johnson, said she wants to enhance the communication between students and professors. In fact, she is currently organizing a forum for behavioral science students to ask their professors questions. It will take place sometime in early November.

Judy Zimmerman, junior senator of business administration, is also organizing a forum for the business students. "Anyone who has any ideas, is welcome to let me know," she said.

Barbara Smith, senior senator-at-large, said she joined S.G.A. because she "heard a lot of not-too-good things about S.G.A. and wanted to see if they were true."

Basically, she feels that these rumors were not true, but does feel students and Carol Kilko, graduate student senator. Since then, Becky Eckstine was appointed junior senator of humanities.

Nagengast said all of the senators are required to:

- * Be a full-time student
- * Maintain a 2.0 average
- * Serve on two committees sometime during the year

Of course, the most important role of the senators is to serve their constituents.

Dargay said she joined S.G.A. to "have a say about things done in the public policy department."

Her main goal is to change the public policy degree from a bachelor of social science to a bachelor of science. She said the public policy students feel the should be better informed about the issues on which S.G.A. is voting.

She said the controversial smoking policy was a prime example of this lack of information; she feels a lot of students did not even realize the policy was being voted on.

"If an issue is going to be voted on, let the students know about it," she said.

Nagengast said, "S.G.A. does not have a good means of getting out to the students."

He also said the S.G.A. meetings, which are open to the student body, are held every Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. in W-139 Olmsted. An agenda for the meetings can be found posted in 216 Olmsted.

The next meeting of the Capital Times staff will be held Friday, Nov. 18 at 2 p.m. in W-337 Olmsted. Please try to attend. Articles will be assigned for the final issue.
