

Penn State football and Pepsi—it's all hype

Tim Brown

I'm the new sports editor, so let me say hello to all of you sports fans. Hello. Now to business.

I really don't like Penn State's football team due to the fact that they are hyped entirely too much. They barely beat Cincinnati, and although they stomped Temple, it was only Temple. The only real challenges they will have are Notre Dame and Miami...

TB'S IN THE HOUSE

Speaking of Miami, come October 10th, Penn State will be spanked hard...

Do you think the $14.5 million from Pepsi had anything to do with the new Pepsi sign on the scoreboard at Beaver stadium? Neither do I...

I wonder how long it will be before there are little Pepsi emblems on those drab uniforms...

While on the subject of our money making football machine, henceforth known as the corporation, how many more players will end the season with police records...

Since the Corporation is already going to a bowl game and are guaranteed millions, will this forever change the way bowl bids are handled? Probably...

I will give credit where credit is due, Penn State has a good team, but there is no way they are going to be National champs this year...

Here's a parting thought: how long do you think it took the ad wizards at Nike to dream up "Godzilla v. Charles Barkley"? Peace.

Soccer team captures a victory

The Penn State soccer team has kicked off the season with a win and a new coach.

Teammates Dennis Butler and Vere Wheatland led their team to a 2-1 victory over Valley Forge Christian College on Tuesday, Sept. 15.

Penn State tried to score 24 times, while the opposition had nine shots at the goal. Goalkeeper George Boylen had three saves.

On the sideline stood the unseen hero: the coach, Jim Galovsky.

Galovsky, a graduate of Rochester University, has brought his knowledge and experience to Penn State Harrisburg.

With previous assistant coaching responsibilities, Galovsky is excited about his first opportunity to be a head coach.

"This is something I have always wanted to do," said Galovsky. "I was impressed with the way they played. They were better than I expected."

Galovsky's goals for the team are simple:

"I want them to play an exciting brand of soccer," said Galovsky. "Hopefully this will attract spectators, which in turn will provide the team with motivation."

The soccer team devotes 10 hours a week in developing their skills. Galovsky commented that he is fortunate to have a team which is dedicated to the sport as well as to academics.

"The commitment is there," he said. "Soccer should be used as a release."

Mark Britton, a junior, who is a forward on the team, has brought his experience to the Penn State team.

"We have good communication and support each other very well," he said.

Jeff Nash, a junior, agreed with his teammate and commented that there is a large sense of comradery.

"Soccer is an ever-changing sport which requires you to think all the time," Galovsky added.

With his strategies and positive outlook, Galovsky is looking to improve upon last years team record of 4-5.

Co-captains for the 1992 team are Dennis Butler, Mike Reteneller and Chris Augustine.

The soccer team will play on home ground 6 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 23, against Delaware Valley.
