

Campus literary magazine, Tarnhelm, seeks submissions

Have you ever taken a picture or written a story or poem that has made you say, "This is good?" Have you ever wondered if it was publishable? Is fear of embarrassment holding you back? Don't let the publishing monster like Random House keep you from expressing yourself. Tarnhelm is for you.

Created in September 1971, Tarnhelm was organized by students of Penn State Harrisburg as a literary showcase for their creativity. The original "Tarnhelm" was a magic, winged helmet forged from the stolen treasure of Rhinegold by Mime, the Nibelung dwarf. The wearer of this helmet was freed to a world limited only by his/her imagination.

This freedom of expression of imagination was the basis for Tarnhelm and has been its goal for the last 21 years. The first edition of the literary magazine contained 26 poems, two short stories and a one-act play. Since this maiden voyage of Tarnhelm, three new categories have been added: black and white photography, black and white drawings, and computer graphics.

Each year's entries have grown, and since last year, student involvement in the publication has tripled. This edition's student-editors, Nancy Heller and MaryAnn Harpin, hope to gain more involvement from students from other divisions.

Although Tarnhelm is directed by a humanities department faculty-advisor, Dr. Theodora Rapp Graham, students from all disciplines (business, engineering, etc.) may submit entries. Submissions are currently being accepted and guidelines are available in the divisional suites.

Prizes are awarded for the poetry, short story, and photography categories. These awards are presented at a reception held at the end of Spring semester. Each entry is reviewed anonymously by a student editorial board to ensure objectivity.

The magazine is supported by the Student Government Association, and allows the Tarnhelm staff to produce a high quality magazine showcase free to all students wishing to examine these works.

What are you waiting for? Let your creativity bloom in Penn State Harrisburg's literary magazine, Tarnhelm!

1992 Tarnhelm winners: (L-R) Rebecca Griffin-Harvey (2nd place-poetry), Lori Graby (1st place-poetry), Rebecca Roberts (1st place-fiction), James Bostick (1st place-photography) and faculty-advisor Dr. Theodora Graham. ### Capital Times needs volunteers

The Capital Times needs student volunteers.

If you are interested in reporting, writing, editing, taking photographs, layout, ad writing and graphic design, acquiring advertisers or just helping out, please call 944-4970 (leave a message) or stop by W-341 before Dec. 15.

No newspaper experience is necessary. You might even be able to earn extra class credits for your participation.

Outstanding Senior Award

Do you know a 92-93 graduate who you consider to be an outstanding student, both academically and civically?

Better yet, how about yourself?

The nomination process is easy. All you have to do is submit a one or two-page letter, describing the achievement of the nominee to the PSH Alumnae Society's Outstanding Graduating Senior Award Committee.

Sharon Cole, chairperson of the award committee, is seeking nominations for that special person who has shown potential for future achievement in his or her chosen field.

In addition to this, the nominee should meet one or more of the following criteria:

- *active in community affairs or professional discipline organizations;
- *active in campus activities at PSH;
- *achieved academic distinction at PSH;
- *working one's way through college at PSH

Faculty, students and staff are qualified to make nominations.

Send your letters to the Community Relations Office, W-106, Attention: Penn State Alumni Society Awards and Recognition Committee.

If you have any further questions about the award, contact Luanne Lawrence, director of community relations at 948-6272.

Deadline for nominations is March 5, 1993.

Student patrol officers sought

Charles Alesky, supervisor of safety/police services, is accepting applications for student patrol jobs for the 1993 spring semester.

Anyone who is interested, can get an application in the Safety/Police Services Office in the CRAGS Building.
