2/PSH NEWS CAPITAL TIMES September 13, 1993

Smitley returns to PSH and the CUB

Sue Barger Capital Times Reporter

After a six year absence, Bud Smitley has returned to Penn State Harrisburg as acting Recreation and Activities director. He will remain until December while Duane Crider is on a leave of absence.

Since Smitley left the campus in 1987, Penn State Harrisburg has cut its varsity sports programs.

of those programs, said that although he is disappointed, he thinks the decision was proper in order for intramural programs to survive.

Smitley, who helped develop many

"I see the value in both programs but if you have to cut one, intercollegiate is the better choice" because more students benefit from intramural programs, Smitley said.

Smitley is deeply rooted in the intercollegiate sports of Penn State Harrisburg, which he supported during his 14 year stay from 1973 to 1987. Smitley built the baseball field with only a few friends and a guide book.

Smitley has recognized the positive changes that have come recently, including making the Capital Union Building more conducive to women. The CUB has a new workout room, aerobics classes, and club sports which involve more women. During his previous stay at PSH, the large majority of students benefiting from the CUB activities were men, Smitley said.

photo by Sue Barger

Bud Smitley --Acting Recreation & Activities Director

After leaving Penn State Harrisburg in 1987, Smitley went on to be the director of the Fellowship Christian Athletes. Smitley said his experiences with FCA will help him continue his dedication to the students as well as the athletic department.

Hours of Operation COMPUTE AB Monday - Thursday 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

2 a.m. to 11 p.m.

フ

σ

Friday Saturday Sunday

2

ш

COMPU

HEINDEL LIBRARY Hours of Operation

Monday thru Thursday 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Friday Saturday Sunday

Macintosh make-over enhances computer lab

Susan Jones-Yurkiewicz Capital Times Reporter

The Apple Lab in the computer center underwent an $80,000 makeover which began at the close of last semester.

Twenty-two of the latest model Macintosh computers were be made because some replacement installed, software was updated and new furniture was added, according to Lakshmana Viswanath, the director of Computer and Hunter said. "Students have had to Information Systems at Penn State learn to trouble-shoot." Harrisburg.

The project was funded by $50,000 from University Park, $15,000 from the Open Gifts and Endowments funds of various campus departments and $15,000 in donated equipment from Apple Computer, Inc.

The old Mac lab consisted of systems that haven't been upgraded in 10 years, according to Viswanath.

The antiquated system often failed, frustrating users, said Peggi Hunter, Assistant Professor of Education, who teaches education classes in the lab. Repairs couldn't parts weren't available.

"One of them even caught fire,"

Education students aren't the only ones to benefit from the new computers. Any student will be able to access the new word processing and desktop publishing software, Viswanath said.

"It's great," Hunter said. "It's nice to be in the 90s.'

8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. 2 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Up all night at the Capital Times

Capital Times Reporter

the tabloid-style previously used to the larger broad-sized pages.

One of the challenges Loeper faces is leading the Capital Times through the semester without a progress?" formal adviser. The advisor, Peter Parisi, resigned shortly after his the first issue of the Capital Times application for tenure was denied.

"Ultimately, we are the ones ago, story ideas were discussed and Michele Loeper, the new editor- collapsed without Paris's presence were turned in to be proofed by in-chief of the campus newspaper, though. It still survives, serving as copy editor, Sue Jones-Yurkiewicz. changed the size of the pages from a bastion of journalism at PSH.

Creating a Paper

"This seems to be a repeating process," Trev Stair, Art Director, said. "Are we making any

The overall process of creating is linear.

At a staff meeting two weeks the deadline was set. Last week, The newspaper has not stories(both hard copy and disks)

See NIGHT, page 6

Students and faculty who attended the International Lunch With Munusamy answered questions educational system Have you ever wanted to dine and

Students get a taste of India socioeconomic conditions. India has a multitude of religions and values which can differ from town to town.

"You have to be careful," said

The lunches are an opportunity about India's family life, for faculty and staff to become and globally and culturally aware.

> "You can learn more about other countries, cultures and regions," said Jose Ayala, a graduate student from Puerto Rico.

"Lunch is the added incentive,"

Matt Hunt

The fall semester sees a new, larger format for the Capital Times, as well as the paper functioning without a former advisor.

The small, all-volunteer staff works with antiquated equipment and tries to put together a quality who suffer, " Loeper said. newspaper.

Flavor had the opportunity to do that in the Gallery lounge on Sept. 8

Paula D. Eiland

Capital Times Reporter

travel to another part of the world for free?

Babu Munusamy, a native of India and a graduate student of Environmental Pollution Control, prepared Indian cuisine for the lunch program is to provide a lunch. He gave an informal presentation of the history and geography of his native land.

Uma Nadarajan, an Information Systems graduate student. "India is a big country and the speaker is from the south, one of many states, so his view can be restricted somewhat to that state."

"The goal of the international forum for informal discussion of lounge. The food of Botswana, other countries," said Joan Swetz, Africa will be featured along with a International Student Advisor.

Swetz said.

Tim Atkinson, a Mechanical • Engineering student, said the food and the discussion were "great."

The next International Lunch With Flavor is scheduled for Oct. 13, at 12:00 p.m. in the Gallery presentation by Flora Paphane.

photo by Paula Eiland

Tasteful Samples --Students and faculty enjoy a taste of India at the International Luncheon held September 8.

Attention Guys and Gals! Discover Your Hidden Beauty

