Lawrence's work was displayed in the Penn State Harrisburg Gallery Lounge from Nov. 4 to Dec. 21 last semester.

During finals week, two of the artist's pieces, "Bad Skin #10" and "Bad Skin #12," were stolen. They are valued at $750.

Both works are notebook size and the investigators of this crime believe that someone slipped the items into a bookbag and left the lounge undetected.

If you have any information regarding the theft of Lawrence's works, contact Police Services at (717) 948-6232.

TeSS provides students with on-line recruiting program

Ann Mease Staff Reporter

Recently Penn State Harrisburg (PSH) career services added a new benefit for all students and alumni who are seeking employment.

Totally Electronic Scheduling System (TeSS) provides students with electronic access to the on-campus recruiting program at University Park and on-campus recruiting and employment opportunities at PSH>

The system allows the student to enter resume information onto a diskette to create an interview request form and a usable copy of your resume which is then loaded into TeSS.

The diskette can be purchased at the campus bookstore for seven dollars an only can be accessed through IBM compatible computers.

Jonathan Schultz, information systems major volunteered to set up TeSS for on-line usage, while doing a work study on campus.

Schultz said," I set up the system to go on-line then I entered my diskette into the system and have gotten numerous job interviews over the last several months.

The interviews are conducted on campus with potential employers from all over Pennsylvania and out of state.

Before you start filling out your diskette Schultz recommends that students gather a updated resume, cover letter and grade transcripts together, so that all information is available to complete the diskette.

Schultz said, "Follow the instructions for completing the diskette step by step, filling in personal information, transcript information, and educational background, just as if you were writing you resume. The entire process takes about 45 minutes."

After the diskette is dropped off at Career Services, students are entered into the system and the inter viewing process starts almost immediately.

The TeSS system allows employers to preselect job candidates and companies choose the candidate to interview prior to their selected interview date.

According to Schultz this service is for students who are looking for internships, co-ops, part time employment and full time careers.

Ann E. Mease Staff Reporter

New developments are unreeling at Penn State Harrisburg bookstore this semester.

Students, faculty and staff can have film developed within a 24 hour period for their convenience by merely filling out an envelope and dropping their film into the slot, at the Kodak Center.

The film is picked up by mail every day at 11 a.m. and returned to the bookstore the very next day, for speedy service.

Donna Connolly, store manager said," this service is another effort to keep the bookstore up-to-date on the students' needs."

The Kodak center is located inside the glass doors before entering the bookstore itself, with directions on how to use the service at the Kodak Center.

Prices for developing film are: 12 exposures for $2.99; 15 exposures for $4.99; 24 exposures for $6.99 and 36 exposures for $8.99. All second sets are

Students rushed in an out of the bookstore passing the film center in their hurry to buy books and school supplies for the beginning of the spring semester.

Dan Rich, criminal justice major said," I live in a dorm on campus and being able to get my film developed at a close location is a convenience for me.

Rich said he is the secretary of Chi Gamma IOTA (XGI), a service club on campus, and takes at least two rolls of film a month for the club.

Communications major lackie Mover said," The film center on campus is convenient for communications majors because some courses like advertising require photography, layout and design."

This semester the bookstore is also featuring a new line of clothing including T-shirts, sweatshirts and special prices on selected clothing and school supplies.

Connolly said students should stop in and fill out an entry form to win a BMWF-650 motorcycle, Eastpak backpacks, or All-Sport shirts and beverages.

Official entry forms are located right in front of the film center before entering the main part of the

Student Activity Fee allocations determined

Melissa A. Jago Staff Reporter

The Penn State Harrisburg Campus Student Activity Fee Allocation Committee (CSAFAC) has allotted funds raised from the Student Activity Fee (SAF) for the 1996-97 academic year. With your help, the CSAFAC, comprised of students, faculty and staff, has made it their priority to meet the needs of the students by improving campus organizations and activities.

The $25 per semester fee was approved by the University Board of Trustees last fall and is charged to students on a pro-rated basis.

The breakdown is as follows: $25 for students taking nine or more credits; $18 for students taking five to eight credits and $9 for students taking less than five credits.

What has this meant for Penn State Harrisburg (PSH)?

It means an excess of $100,000 a year set aside for such things as diversity programs and services; distinguished speakers; support for athletics, out-of-class academic programs; and additional activities at PSH.

Director of Student Affairs, Donald Holtzman said that the SAF has helped PSH "in a number of ways.

According to Holtzman, the funds raised have created opportunities for students that may have not been possible without the Specifically, Holtzman believes that students can explore an array of cultures through keynote speakers.

"It's all cumulative," he said. "Our objective is to respond to the diversity of students at this campus."

Members of the new fencing club have experienced first hand how well the SAF has aided students at PSH.

Club president, Rachel Wright admits that the SAF "enabled the fencing club to be!"

According to Wright, the fencing club's budget proposal was returned after all SGA funds were disbursed and therefore left this organization's future hopeless. However, with the help from the CSAFAC, the fencing club received the money it needed to establish a first rate club.

With quality equipment and instructor Bryant Haynes, the club has broadened PSH's horizons. Wright concludes, "I think it is great that the SAF is being used for students."

Now that the fencing club has funding, they are now seeking interested members. The club meets every Mon. and Wed. from 7 to 10 p.m. in the Capital Union Building's (CUB) quiet study

WPSH, PSH's radio station is also benefiting from the SAF.

According to the station's Public Relation's Director, Kelly Quinn, WPSH can only be heard in the Olmsted Building because the station doesn't have a transmitter.

WPSH now has the funds to purchase a transmitter by mid-semester.

"Our goal is to reach all students, faculty and staff on campus, said Quinn. "WPSH is about bring information to PSH."

Once settled, the station hopes to promote campus and community events, provide weather reports, continually update campus news, conduct give-aways and of course, play music, she said. Currently, WPSH is looking for members and a station manager. If interested, please call the station at 948-6396.

According to the 1996-97 SAF manual, the dis- and practices. bursement of funds should consider the demographics of the student body, needs of the campus, and the opportunities to enhance student life, encourage involvement and build the community.

To insure these guidelines, William Asbury, director of student affairs, developed CSAFAC to determine how this new funding should be spent at the campus level.

Holtzman said the committee utilized student opinions gathered from all Penn State campuses last spring to set guidelines on how campuses could use the funding. Those guidelines were then issued to campuses this past summer.

To ensure proper SAF

allocations, the General Student Activity Board will annually review the use of the funds for consistency with the established principles

However, it is the CSAFAC's responsibility for drawing up the annual spending plan and allocating funds to the SGA. This campuses

CSAFAC is comprised of 12 members including: Camille Bigles-Perez; George Bioeser; Tahirah Bolger; George Daka; Jason Hostetter; Joe Mickey; Student Government Association President Frank Nieves (co-chair); John Porter, Clem Gilpin; Director of Student Affairs, Donald Holtzman (co-chair); Donna

Howard; and Louisa Morgan. "It's really exciting to see this committee work," Holtzman said. "They're committed to see that student needs are met."

The Four Diamonds has received over six million dollars in contributions and last year over one million dollars were raised at "thon". Since the Millard's started the fund in 1972, over nine million dollars has been raised.

This year, PSH will be supporting the Four Diamonds by participating in the dance a thon, and planning their own fund-raising activities.

A concert, featuring the local band fuel started off the fund-raising activities last Thursday. in the gymnasium of the Capital Union Building (CUB). Stacie Wentzel and Stacy Quinn, PSH Thon committee co-chairs planned the event.

Another concert, featuring the Philadelphiabased band Mr. Green Genes, will held on Jan. 24 at 9 p.m. in the CUB gymnasium. This fund-raising effort is sponsored by the PSH Psychology Club. General admission is $5 or $3 with student I.D.

The proceeds from both events will be donated to the Four Diamonds Fund.

Additionally, two representatives from PSH will be representing the campus at Penn State Main to celebrate the 25th anniversary, "Miracles in Motion," Thon weekend.

Stacy Quinn and Kristen McGlennen will be among the first representatives from the Commonwealth Campuses to join Penn State Main in this cause.

Thon co-chair Wentzel said that she has attended the dance a thon for the past two years.

"It's an incredible experience that you can't put into words," she said.

Wentzel added that the hundreds of college students that attend this event in an effort to raise money for children with cancer dispels the common myth that "Generation X" isn't motivated to help solve social problems.

"It's going to be exciting this year," she added.

The event has already proved "exciting" as the Main Campus Thon committee was interviewed on "Good Morning America" a week ago. Additionally, students were flown to Chicago to interview with Oprah Winfrey. It has not yet been announced when that interview will be broad-
